Navy Planes On Sea Flight Still Hidden In Censorship

Whereabouts of 45-Unit Armada Remains Official Secret.

Pilots Familiar With Ocean Perils

The Naval Maneuvers.

The 45 naval planes somewhere in mid-Pacific, were "lost" behind a cloak of censorship.

In Washington an official hinted the present flights were "child's play" compared to a prospective flight of 450 Navy planes from surface vessels.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Honolulu, May 10.—Forty-five United States Navy fighting seaplanes were somewhere in the mid-Pacific between here and tiny Midway Island today, "lost" behind a war-time censorship.

The squadrons left here at 7:20 a. m. yesterday on the 1,323-mile overwater hop to the isolated cable station nearly half-way to Japan.

Numerous auxiliary naval craft, participating also in the gigantic United States fleet maneuvers in the North Pacific, dotted their route and it was possible they clustered around one of these during the night.

Good Weather Reported.

The Weather Bureau reported good flying weather over the entire route when they departed, and no severe storms were developing in their original path. Whether they diverted their course once they got to sea or paused during the night was as much a mystery as whether they actually reached Midway Island, their goal.

They could have arrived there in about 11 hours, it was estimated at Wheeler Airport here, whence they took off Thursday. If they roared straight on their course northwest over the Pacific, they should have reached there about 6:20 p. m., Thursday (or between 11 and midnight, Friday, E. S. T.).

Naval authorities here remained silent about the planes, as well as about all other phases of the maneuvers. Aside from the naval radio there is no way to check on the whereabouts of any of the planes and civilian speculation on the safety of the fliers intensified during the day.

May Have Landed.

One rumor was that the ships might have paused overnight at French Frigate Shoals, a series of coral reefs about 600 miles northwest of Honolulu. The pilots are familiar with the topography of these reefs and projecting sand spits, and belief here was that French Frigate Shoals provided the squadron a half-way haven.

One report regarded as reliable said the planes probably would not reach Midway until Saturday, presumably pausing on the way for drills with surface units of the fleet.

All radio communication with the planes—official and commercial—was silent in keeping with the war-like conditions under which the entire maneuvers are being conducted.

A rain squall and 24-mile wind prevailed in the vicinity of Midway Island during the night, and the squadrons might have alighted alongside a ship to avoid the disturbance.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 10.—French naval maneuvers designed especially to test the protection of convoys in war-time were begun today off the Moroccan coast.

The second squadron of the French navy, commanded by Admiral Darlan on the battleship Provence, participated. The exercises were the first of a series in the Mediterranean and Atlantic, ending June 20, when the first and second squadrons will return to Brest after combined maneuvers.

Every type of ship is taking part in the exercises, including battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines. The warships will cruise as far west as the Azores and make halts at north African ports.

Radio City Thief Gets Royal Gems

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Treasures once the property of the Russian imperial family and valued at $50,000 were reported stolen from a store in Radio City tonight by an unmasked gunman.

Eight gold snuff boxes, said to be worth $15,000, were among the articles taken.

The store, at 36 West Fiftieth street, was the display room of the Russian Imperial Art Treasures, Inc., and contained expensive rugs and antiques, as well as jewels.

The President: 'Dick, I Salute You'

Rear Admiral Byrd returned to Washington yesterday—to be welcomed by the President of the United States and a crowd of 5,000. And here is the scene that took place.

Rome Offers Bridal Bounty To Conscripts

Men Expected Shortly to Be Sent to the Front in Abyssinia.

The Situation Abroad.

The semiofficial Giornal d'Italia, in Rome, attacked European "cannon merchants" whom Italy has accused of shipping arms to Abyssinia.

Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France, arriving to assure Poland of French friendship, found the nation's dictator, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, was ill.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 10.—The war office tonight issued a decree offering a bonus and three weeks' furlough to any recruits in the conscript class of 1911 who wanted to marry.

The youths would be provided with 500 lire for honeymoon expenses—$41 in United States currency, but sufficient in Italy for a trip to the seashore or mountains for a young couple of ordinary circumstances.

The move was regarded as having more than romantic significance, however, being interpreted by some as an indication that these youths might be shipped overseas for duty in East Africa shortly—and that therefore they should join the "more babies" campaign before going into foreign military service.

The "war brides" doubtless will be expected to add to the nation's population as a result of the war office's magnanimous offer—and replenish the supply of fighting men in the next generation if their men fail to come back from "over there" across the Mediterranean.

Arms Merchants Assailed.

The decree coincided with an editorial in the semiofficial Giornal d'Italia attacking the European "cannon merchants" which Italy openly has declared are shipping arms and ammunition to Abyssinia.

The paper said European factories delivered 10,000 Hauser rifles, 2,000,000 cartridges and 200 machine guns to Abyssinia between January and mid-April.

Among the nations shipping munitions to this potential enemy empire, allegedly is Germany.

"Germany has furnished Abyssinia with abundant chemical materials which it is believed will be used in the manufacture of explosives and gas bombs," the newspaper said.

"It is learned from a reliable source that Germany is preparing

Byrd Is Welcomed at Pier By Roosevelt as 5,000 Shout Greeting; Explorer, Grayer, Reports Finding Valuable Data.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd returned from the cold wastes of the Antarctic yesterday afternoon and beneath a warm, spring sun was greeted by the President of the United States and accorded a welcome such as the National Capital reserves only for those it deeply honors.

As guns boomed in steady salute, and a thunderstorm, which had threatened the triumphal entry of the "conqueror" of Little America, passed down to the sea, thousands cheered the slow docking of the ice-scarred Bear of Oakland, veteran of the North and flagship of the second Byrd Antarctic Expedition.

After a day of leisurely cruising up the Potomac from the United States Marine base at Quantico, Va., the Bear was swung to her dock as guns rumbled their welcome. A few minutes later Rear Admiral Byrd was shaking hands with President Roosevelt, who greeted him formally and then turned, beaming, to say, "Dick, I salute you."

Above the cheering of some 5,000 persons on the Navy Yard pier sounded the United States Navy Band, and on the deck of the Bear penguins and dogs added to the din. After Admiral Byrd had been formally received, President Roosevelt stood with the hot sun streaming down upon him and greeted by name every one of the expedition as they passed before him in single file. There was speechmaking, but it was brief. There were some tears, but they were hidden, and there was much joy as families saw for the first time in two years their sons and husbands who had been as far "down under" as man can go.

Reticent on Adventures.

In the cabin of the Bear, a small, snug compartment crowded with luggage, which, incongruously enough, included a tennis racquet, he told for the first time of his second penetration of the icebound polar regions. But there was no boasting, and there was much reticence. Of science he would speak freely. But of personal adventure there was little.

It was noticeable to those gathered around him that his four and one-half months of solitude in his snowbound hut in the heart of Little America had touched him deeply. There was still the shy smile, still the readiness to take or pass a joke; but there were lines in the face that had not been there before. And the hair was grayer.

It was of this solitude that he was asked to speak, after he had

Metropolitan's Director Falls Dead in Office

Herbert Witherspoon Held Victim of Heart Disease; Wife Nearby.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Herbert Witherspoon died suddenly today, two months after he had reached the height of his operatic career—general manager of the world-famous Metropolitan Opera as successor to Giulio Gatti-Casazza.

The tall, white-haired director, who won recognition as singer, instructor and executive, collapsed in the "Met" offices shortly after 4 p. m. (E. S. T.). Death, caused by a heart attack, was immediate.

He had just completed the preliminary announcement of the coming season, preparatory to sailing tomorrow for Europe.

Throughout the day he had signed contracts with singers and conferred over plans for increasing the lists of subscribers.

When he collapsed, Witherspoon was in the office of Edward Ziegler, assistant manager. Ziegler and Earle R. Lewis, business manager, were with him.

The director's third wife, the former Blanche Skeath, whom he married a year ago, was in her husband's office down the corridor.

Witherspoon was 61 years old, a native of Buffalo. He was graduated from Yale in 1895, studied art for a time and then studied music

Three Jurors Cry Coercion In Beard Case

Decision Due Tuesday on Move to Upset Guilty Verdict.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

Demanding a new trial for Sam Beard, reputed gambling tycoon, defense attorneys yesterday charged that three members of the jury that convicted Beard and his 12 co-defendants Monday night voted for the guilty verdict because they had been accused of being "plants."

In support of their accusations, the attorneys, John Sirica and Maurice McInerney, filed affidavits from the three jurors, who described being intimidated by the jury's foreman, Charles W. Hauf.

The jurors whose affidavits were entered are Mrs. Geraldine Q. Wilmer, 27, of 2729 Connecticut avenue; Mrs. Mildred Beyer, 32, of 3731 Jenifer street northwest, and F. J. Kraus, 29, of 933 L street northwest.

Decision Due Tuesday.

Justice Joseph W. Cox, before whom the case was tried, took the motion for a new trial under advisement. He announced he would render his decision Tuesday.

Sirica and McInerney clashed frequently with Assistant District Attorney Roger Robb, who, with Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly, was in charge of prosecuting Beard and his ring of alleged "small fry" gamblers.

No sooner had the charges of coercion on the jury been made, and the affidavits read, than Robb was on his feet.

"You can't impeach the verdict by affidavit," he said. "What went on in the jury room can not be brought out now."

"Plant" Accusation.

Hauf called for a vote Monday afternoon when the jury got the case, Mrs. Wilmer said in her affidavit, and the vote was 8 to 3 for conviction, with Mrs. Beyer, Kraus and she voting for acquittal.

At this point, according to all three affidavits, Hauf looked at Mrs. Beyer and asked:

"Mrs. Beyer, are you a 'plant?'"

"Don't be ridiculous," she replied, denying the charge. In her affidavit she added that this naturally influenced her.

"I didn't want to be pointed out as anything like that because there wasn't any truth in it," Mrs. Wilmer declared. "That remark influenced me in my verdict."

Suggestion of a "plant" was responsible for his going over to the guilty side, Kraus said. He added he had been unemployed for more than a year.

"I didn't want to be suspected of being a plant," he added.

3 French Fliers Killed As Plane Dives Into Sea

Cherbourg, France, May 10 (AP).—Three French naval aviators were killed and one injured today when their seaplane dived into the water near the naval arsenal here.

Watchers said the plane dived vertically from 1,000 feet and hit the water with terrific force. It sank soon after and naval divers, who brought up the three bodies, succeeded in getting out the fourth alive.

Leaders Quit Regime, Limit NRA to April

Senate Democrats Bind Selves to Clark Resolution.

Action Slap at President, Now Forced to Hope for House Rescue.

Senate Democrats broke sharply with the President yesterday over NRA extension, massing solidly behind the Clark resolution to continue the codes for only ten months and bell the Blue Eagle.

Unmoved by their action, President Roosevelt told reporters he wanted a two-year extension. He said he preferred other clarifications not carried in the Clark resolution, but declined to amplify his statement.

Senate action was taken at a conference of Senate Democrats called to expedite a jammed-up legislative program. Concurrence in the Clark resolution was interpreted as binding on all Senate Democrats, with the exception of two or three who excused themselves.

Banks Heavily on the House.

The President is banking heavily on the House to put through a two-year extension and amendments to the NRA act written by Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coordinator, and observers generally read this inference into his statement.

Senate opponents of full Blue Eagle powers, however, have anticipated the House move and are ready for it, it was learned. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, author of the Senate resolution, has served notice on Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee that it may not be well for them to go the whole route.

One plan having strong Senate backing is to refuse to send the NRA extension measure to conference, if the House passes a two-year continuance bill. Clark said the net result of such tactics may be that no NRA action whatsoever would be taken before the present set-up expires June 16.

Richberg actively has been urging the Administration's two-year continuance plan in the House and, only recently, Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee voted to support the proposal in that chamber, with the hope that a plan nearer the Administration's liking might be perfected in conference.

Yesterday's conference of Senate Democrats was called for the purpose of speeding the work of the Senate but the Clark NRA resolution, already favorably reported by the Finance Committee in defiance of the President's wishes, monopolized debate.

Byrd to Vote No.

Upshot of the meeting was that all Democrats present, with the single exception of Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, were informally bound not to offer further amendments to complicate the issue and slow down consideration.

Senator Black reserved the right to offer his 30-hour week bill as an amendment to the Clark resolution. One other Democrat, Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia, indicated he would not be bound by the conference action. He plans to vote a straight "no" against all NRA extension proposals.

Appealing for Democratic co-operation to avoid a legislative impasse, Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson obtained unanimous concurrence in his proposal "that all members cooperate in so far as they are able to do so."

Robinson said conferees were of the opinion that "the Senate can not finish its labors prior to sometime between July 1 and July 15."

"All Senators would like to see an earlier conclusion, but it does not appear that is probable," he said.

Commenting on this, a Republican leader said the Senate could finish in June if the President would lay aside the more controversial "must" measures. He added:

"If they try to pass everything, we will be here all summer."

The Clark NRA resolution report-

Tydings and Long Clash Over Issue

Cash Idea to Be Pushed If Senate Upholds Expected Veto.

By Robert C. Albright.

A move to revive the Vinson cash bonus payment bill in both House and Senate, if an expected veto of the expansionist Patman bill is sustained by the Senate, gathered force yesterday at the Capitol.

This plan would be the answer of veterans to the contention of Administration leaders that the bonus issue "died" for this session with passage of the Patman bill. The resurrected Vinson bill would be introduced in the House immediately on the Senate's vote to uphold a veto, it was said.

All bonus action, however, went over until next week, as the Senate adjourned for the week-end without taking any action on pending motions to reconsider the Patman bill vote.

Speculation Over Message.

Statements by two high Administration officials meanwhile provoked some speculation on the President's forthcoming bonus message to Congress.

Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, told a Senate Banking sub-committee that the $2,000,000,000 proposed to be paid in Treasury notes under the Patman bill would be no more inflationary than the issuance of a similar amount of bonds.

Speaking to the North Carolina State Bankers Association in Pinehurst, N. C., Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said it might be a good thing to settle the bonus issue once and for all, thus taking it out of politics.

"The few billions that the Government has expended in relief measures, including the new $4,880,000,000 public works and relief authorization, will not be an unbearable burden," Jones said, "not even the $2,000,000,000 additional that it seems likely that Congress may add in payment of the adjusted service certificates to the veterans."

No Inclination to Hurry.

There was no inclination in either the Patman bloc or strictly Administration ranks yesterday to hurry the Patman bonus bill to the White House. Advocates of the expansionist bill were anxious to delay consideration until they can register the full effect of veterans' lobbyist efforts, and incidentally muster their full strength in the Senate.

Although Patmanites still appeared about four votes shy of the ballots needed to override a presidential veto, they were overlooking no bets. It was learned that a cable may be dispatched to Senator Robert Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, now in the Virgin Islands, to fly back to Washington. He favors the Patman plan.

Another vote may be picked up if former Representative Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, is appointed next week to succeed the late Bronson Cutting in the Senate.

Opponents Are Silent.

Opponents of the Patman plan, believed about 35 strong, voiced no criticism of these maneuvers. They believe the President can not afford to be influenced by letters and telegrams poured into the White House at the instance of American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars appeals.

Although it was learned authoritatively the Vinson bill, which provides the usual Treasury appropriation instead of Patman "greenbacks," may be re-introduced, no Senators or House members are ready to have their names connected with the plan until the Patman bill is disposed of. It was

English Noble Jailed

THE DUKE OF MANCHESTER.

'Merely a Mug,' Laments Duke Jailed in Fraud

Portly Manchester Draws 9 Months for Pawning Mother's Jewels.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10.—The portly Duke of Manchester, as he gloomily paced a jail cell tonight after being sentenced to nine months' imprisonment for fraud in pawning the jewels of his late American-born mother, admitted ruefully "my trouble is I have been a mug—I am not quite sure I am glad I was born a duke."

Found guilty in Old Bailey of obtaining $3,250 under false pretenses, the 59-year-old duke, ninth holder of the ancient peerage, was taken immediately to jail while his attorneys attempted in vain to see the king to secure the nobleman's release on bail, pending an appeal.

It was a brighter cell than the age-old dungeons of the duke's three castles, but this fact did not cheer him up.

"My trouble is I have been a mug," he said. "My one regret in life is that I was never allowed to go in business when I was a boy. People think being a duke must be great fun. Well, it has its advantages, but I am not quite sure I am glad I was born a duke."

The duke, whose first wife was Miss Helen Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, Ohio, took slight solace from the fact that for the first time in years a beleaguering host of creditors was unable to get at him in Brixton Jail. He admitted under cross-examination today there had been 67 petitions against him and a number of judgment summonses.

"I have been so broke I have only just been able to pay for my valet's meals," he said.

Reminiscing, the nobleman recalled he once challenged the former crown prince of Germany to a duel during a row in a Mayfair hotel over a beautiful debutante. "I called the prince a very rude name and offered to give him satisfaction in Germany, but his royal highness did not seem to take kindly to my suggestions," he asserted.

The duke, well known in America, where theatrical circles call him

Four Convicts Shoot Way Out Of Prison, Kill Guard, Wound 2

Texas Possemen Track Injured Leader of Break and Pals After Wild Battle at Farm Barracks From Which Hamilton Escaped.

By the Associated Press.

Huntsville, Tex., May 10.—Guard Virgil Welch was killed and a guard, a convict leader and a convict turnkey were wounded as four men shot their way from the Eastham prison farm barracks late today.

Jack Peddy, convict barber, wounded in leading the dash through the prison gate, disappeared after guards left him for dead while they pressed into dense woods nearby in search of his three mates.

The shooting was reminiscent of the fatal Eastham break June 16, 1934, of Raymond Hamilton, boastful 22-year-old gunman, and the bank-robbing Joe Palmer, who died in the electric chair here early today for slaying Maj. Crowson, a guard.

Welch was shot to death as he dashed from a dormitory to investigate shots fired in a struggle of Peddy and Tom Stevens, a guard. Stevens was wounded slightly.

Homer Parker, convict turnkey, was shot four times.

Stevens and Parker were brought to a Huntsville hospital from the farm, 40 miles north of this city. Possemen, expressing belief the wounded Peddy could not get far, hunted through the darkness for him and the other fugitives.

W. B. Cline, assistant steward at the farm, who brought the wounded guard and turnkey here, said Peddy "had shaved me just an hour before."

"Peddy slipped up," Cline said, "and hit Guard Tom Stevens, who was searching some convicts before letting them into the dormitory, on the head with a .38-caliber revolver.

"Stevens turned and grabbed him, and he started shooting, trying to hit Stevens. But Stevens shoved the gun away and Peddy meanwhile sank four bullets into Turnkey Homer Parker, who was standing nearby. He then clubbed Stevens across the head again, knocking him unconscious.

"Guard Virgil Welch, who was sleeping upstairs in the guard dormitory, came running downstairs, and Peddy shot him as he reached mid-landing, Welch toppling downstairs and dashing his brains out.

"Meantime the other three convicts came running out of the barracks room when Peddy unlocked the door for them, and the four

Brandon Smith Gets $125,000 Balm Verdict Against Cannon

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., May 10.—F. Brandon Smith, jr., 29-year-old Charlotte real estate man, today was awarded $125,000 in his alienation-of-affections suit against his father-in-law, Joseph F. Cannon, millionaire Concord business man.

After deliberating five hours, the jury decided the loss of the affections of Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith was worth $75,000, and that Cannon should pay $50,000 punitive damages for causing the disruption of their home.

Defense counsel immediately moved that the verdict be set aside "as contrary to the weight of evidence." Arguments will be heard tomorrow.

The former wife of the late Smith Reynolds, who married Smith, a childhood sweetheart, a few months after her first divorce, obtained a Hot Springs, Ark., divorce almost a year ago to the day.

Smith charged Cannon fomented discontent on Anne's part and carried her to Hot Springs because he feared they would succeed in taking away from him little Anne Cannon Reynolds, Mrs. Smith's daughter by her first marriage, who has been reared by her grandparents.

Cannon made a blanket denial, claiming Anne herself insisted on the divorce "because she could not live happily" with Smith, whose income of around $200 a month was compared with her $600 monthly and her vast family resources.

Smith cited a message from her through a friend while she was in Hot Springs to get the divorce:

"Tell Brandon I love him."

The courtroom after today's verdict was comparable to the momentary silence after an explosion. Cannon, smiling nonchalantly, made no move. Copy boys carrying the verdict to waiting wires moved like figures in an old-fashioned movie.

Then the judge instructed the jurors to step up for their pay vouchers, lawyers went into huddles and business was resumed.

Queen Elizabeth Gravely Ill From Grief Over King's Death

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Brussels, Belgium, May 10.—The Queen Mother, Elizabeth, widow of Albert, lies ill in Italy, sinking daily despite efforts to arouse her from melancholy over the tragic death of her warrior husband a year ago.

Despite official denials from her household here, the United Press tonight learned reliably that Elizabeth is unable to sleep or rest.

She grieves constantly, and her grief apparently has become an obsession which her friends fear will soon drive her to the grave, alongside King Albert, who died in a fall from a rocky eminence in southern Belgium while mountain-climbing in February of last year.

The Queen Mother has lost weight steadily in recent months, and is down to only 100 pounds. Her resistance is low and reports indicate she has lost the will to live.

Elizabeth will be 59 on July 25 and, although normally a healthy, comparatively energetic woman in years past, she has shown her age alarmingly in the last several months.

Before going to Italy, the queen mother spent practically her entire time in her apartments at Laeken Castle, outside Brussels, surrounded by photographs and memories of her husband. She spent many hours modelling a small bust of Albert as she knew him best—smiling and serene, as when he encouraged his men in the trenches in the war.

Her son, King Leopold, in the last year has been practically her only visitor in her self-willed seclusion.

Elizabeth was born July 25, 1876, in one of the many small German courts. Her father was Duke Karl Theodore, of Bavaria, and her mother was a member of the royal family of Portugal, the house of Bragance.

She met Albert in 1900, a thin, rather plain girl then, with a heavy helmet of fair hair. They were married October 2 of that year.

Democrat Backs Gold Clause Test

Robert Jackson Proposed Latest Legal Query.

By the Associated Press.

Robert Jackson, of New Hampshire, a former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, was disclosed yesterday to be the author of the latest plan to test the legality of abrogation of the gold clause in Government securities.

The plan, made public recently, contemplates submitting Treasury gold clause notes falling due on June 15 in payment of income taxes at the rate of $1.69 per $1 of face value—the difference is due to dollar devaluation.

Jackson said he expected the collector of Internal Revenue would refuse to receive the notes, whereupon his clients would pay the remaining, and disputed, 69 cents on each dollar under protest and bring suit for recovery.

By the Associated Press.

The AAA was cautioned yesterday by its administrator, Chester A. Davis, to maintain strict neutrality toward a projected trek upon Washington of scores of dirt farmers intent upon personally pressing their demands upon Congress.

The cautionary word was interpreted by other AAA officials as predicated on a belief that the farm agency might be held responsible for any action by the assembled farm group, particularly in view of the AAA's plea for farm support for the pending AAA amendments.

One high executive official in the AAA, refusing to be quoted by name, said:

"The plan to come to Washington apparently started in Texas and in the cotton country. I think this is the inevitable result of the repeated attacks on the processing tax which have been made recently, and it is easy to understand why the cotton farmers would desire to come here to present their side of the question."

He said delegations would come from at least seven Midwestern States.

Farmers Expected to Act.

AAA officials argued that the corn-hog and wheat farmers were rallying because they had decided that if repeal of the cotton-processing tax is effected the attack on the AAA will spread immediately to other existing programs.

Davis said recently he did not believe the farmers would "let go" of the AAA, and that the farmers "will be heard from" before the final vote on the pending AAA amendments.

Plans of the delegation were not known here, although it was expected that in addition to conferring with members of Congress, the group would call upon Secretary Wallace and Davis. One letter received here asked Davis to address them.

Vanguard Moves Out.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 10 (AP).—The vanguard of "a dirt farmer" lobby moved out of the corn belt today on a trip to Washington to urge the preservation and strengthening of the agricultural adjustment act.

Forerunners of the pilgrimage, which is expected to swell to more than 500, were four northwest Iowa farmer-members of the corn-hog control associations.

The farmers, paying their own expenses, assertedly represent nobody but themselves and the opinions of neighbors who they know favor the Administration agricultural law.

C. H. Day, of Plainview, Tex., chairman of the Texas cotton advisory council, was en route to the Capital tonight to make preparations for receiving a 250-member delegation from his State.

Convene Here Tuesday.

The farmers, principally from Midwest and Southwest States, will convene in Washington Tuesday morning for general discussion and talks on the agricultural adjustment problem.

After Tuesday's meeting the farmers plan to buttonhole congressmen from their districts in the cause of the AAA and its amendments.

At least 500 farmers were known to be joining in the march on Washington.

Before leaving Texas, Day asserted that "this is not a shirt-tail caravan or 'gimme' parade. The crop control programs will be discussed with AAA administrative heads and with congressmen." Day declared benefit payments saved Southwestern farmers and have been a buoyant factor in merchants' business, tradesmen and professional men in agricultural areas.

The Texas delegation, largest of those scheduled for the trek, will converge at Longview Sunday to leave for Washington. Most of the other groups will leave tomorrow morning from the State capitals.

Between You and Me

Bonus Heat Turned On Wrong Way; Roosevelt's Advisers Not Alarmed; Foreign Trade Gains.

By Raymond Clapper

HUEY LONG and some other advocates of the Patman bonus bill are suggesting that President Roosevelt will commit political suicide if he vetoes this measure.

As threats, such statements are a waste of time.

In the first place, Mr. Roosevelt has indicated rather plainly that he has made up his mind to veto the Patman bill. In the second place, even if his mind had not been made up, such statements and the attempt to force him by flooding the White House with thousands of telegrams would leave Mr. Roosevelt no alternative than to resist such strong-arm tactics by an organized minority. If there was a chance of winning Mr. Roosevelt over, bonus advocates are doing everything possible to make it impossible for him to accept this measure.

* * * *

Such threats do not even alarm Mr. Roosevelt's advisers. They have seen too many dramatic threats wilt flat in the showdown.

In 1932 the country was told that if Roosevelt was elected, grass would grow in the city streets. But he was elected and the city streets became cluttered up not with grass but with more automobiles from factories which last month broke all April records except that of 1929. In the early days of NRA when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson spoke with an authority second only to that of the tablets handed down from Mount Sinai, he warned that removal of the Blue Eagle from the doorpost of a recalcitrant business man would be a sentence of economic death. Well, there are fewer business failures than ever, and few if any due to loss of the Blue Eagle. As prophecies, political threats are as undependable as promises of prosperity around the corner.

* * * *

Father Coughlin says Mr. Roosevelt is too smart a politician to veto the bonus. It is an academic question but an interesting one nevertheless. Who are the smart politicians? They are the men who say to themselves, "When in doubt I shall do the right thing." Politics is a cynical profession, but the most successful ones are those who proceed with a certain audacity and indifference to the result at the ballot box.

It is a paradoxical fact that nine times out of ten the man who keeps his eye glued too closely on the ballot box has more trouble than the one who develops his backbone and in a crisis can reject an offer to bribe him with votes. That was Coolidge's stock in trade.

Mr. Roosevelt is, as Father Coughlin said, a smart politician. He is a smarter one, most people here think, than Father Coughlin. He has two courses open. One is to weaken under fire and yield his own expressed convictions to an artificially inspired clamor. The other course is to stand on his beliefs, preserve his self-respect, and strengthen the confidence of the country in his willingness to do what he believes is best regardless of the political consequences.

A smart politician would, of course, choose the latter alternative, and it would not take him very long to do so.

Although he has been represented as having said that foreign trade is a thing of the past, Mr. Roosevelt yesterday pointed hopefully to the fact that foreign trade has shown gains for the last two years.

Economists more and more are swinging around to the conclusion that the wave of economic nationalism is bound to run its course and give way eventually to a restoration of exchange in commodities. Monetary troubles, which have made exchange difficult at times, have contributed to the handicaps.

But the pressure to satisfy human wants never relents and it is inconceivable to many students that in the long run these forces will not break down artificial political barriers.

* * * *

One phase of the discussion revolves around the price-lifting measures adopted by the Roosevelt Administration and handled largely under AAA. Agriculture officials cling stoutly to their contention that price is not the main difficulty in the export situation. They cite tobacco as an illustration. Tobacco prices went up sharply last year due to the crop control program. The value of tobacco exports rose 57 per cent, representing almost entirely an increase of price. Volume rose four-tenths of 1 per cent. Retention of the volume in face of this sharp price increase was due primarily to the preference for American tobaccos which prevented resort to other and cheaper varieties, officials say.

The serious falling off of cotton exports has been attributed by critics of AAA to the price-lifting measures. AAA officials, even after a first-hand foreign survey, insist that exchange difficulties rather than price have caused the trouble. Their charts of cotton prices covering the United States, Brazil, India and Egypt show parallel curves, rising and falling together, but always maintaining the same differential. They argue that no matter how low the United States let cotton go, competing foreign producers would still stay below the American price. Whether they are right or wrong about it, American officials give no indication of weakening on their insistence for continued control and price pegging.

Incidentally, price fluctuations have odd results. Several shiploads of American cotton, sold abroad, were reshipped back to the United States and sold here, due to temporary shortages in certain grades which brought premium prices. Some of this cotton went to Japan and came back, to be used eventually in American mills.

At least two Texas Representatives—Dies and Eagle—expect to try their luck against Senator Sheppard in the Texas senatorial primaries next year. But owing to a Texas law, which says that campaign expenditures must be accounted for from the day one's candidacy is announced, they are holding off with formal announcements. However, Eagle has found a way around that. He has announced that later on he will announce his candidacy.

Statue Breathes For Helen Keller

'Old Viking' Strolls In as She Examines Bronze.

By the Associated Press.

A bronze statue came to life and wept real tears yesterday for Helen Keller, celebrated blind educator.

Miss Keller stopped in the Labor Department lobby to examine Joe Davidson's bust of Andrew Furuseth, president of the Seamen's Union, and known as "The Old Viking" of the American labor movement.

While she was feeling the lined face of the bust, into the lobby came Furuseth, headed for an interview with Secretary Perkins. A guard introduced them. Miss Keller confirmed her mind picture of the veteran labor leader by tracing with her fingers the ruggedness of his face. Furuseth, who told Miss Keller he had read many of her works, was so impressed that tears trickled down his cheeks.

New Chain Hits Huey, And It Costs Nothing

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., May 10.—A new "share-the-wealth" chain letter, its object to shower Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, with protests, today made its appearance here. The letter did not provide for sending a dime to the name at the head of the list.

Chain Letters in Hand, Man Is Found Dead

Baltimore, May 10 (AP).—Five dime chain letters clutched in his hand, Andrew R. Lee, 38, was found dead in the garage at the rear of his home here today.

There was no trace of carbon monoxide in the garage, police said, and physicians said Lee probably died of a heart attack.

Burglars and Uncle Sam Make 'Dimers' Road to Riches Rough

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 10.—The chain-letter "road to fortune," already clogged by thousands of amateurs, was greased to slippery proportions tonight by gamblers, burglars—and Uncle Sam's agents.

The professionals were after the amateurs to take them for a trimming. The agents were after evidence against both.

But the chain craze spread like dandelions in spring. No sooner did disillusionment dig it out of Springfield, Mo., than it swept over St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Fayetteville, Ark., and elsewhere.

The professionals there started a $1 chain, getting in on the profits which accrue to the few who enter the game early. Tom Stowers, police sergeant, estimated the promoters made more than $1,500 overnight. Hundreds who lost flooded police headquarters with complaints. Today police found the promoters had left with batches of letters after promising contributors to deliver them elsewhere in Missouri to save postage and avoid prosecution.

Burglars broke into a branch postoffice at Springfield, Mo., before it opened today, tearing letters in a search for coins and bills.

In Springfield, where Thusday $2, $3 and $5 chains did a landslide business, the fad was almost dead. Several of Springfield's "operators" were reported planning to move to Tulsa, Okla.

Postal inspectors were sent from Washington to cities where the craze is at its height, instructed to seek evidence of any postal law violations.

Seven arrests have been made at San Antonio, Tex., and three in Denver—where the chain letter fad apparently got its start—on fraud accusations. Receipt at the White House of more than 200 chain letters spurred Government officials to action.

At Davenport, Iowa, Mayor Merle F. Wells set the police department in motion today to stop "racketeering."

Relief Agency In Illinois Acts To Close Doors

Final $1,200,000 Provided to Feed Needy, With Deadlock Unbroken.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10.—The Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, dispenser of aid to the State's unemployed since 1932, tonight voted to close its headquarters, liquidate its assets and discharge all employes except those required to wind up its affairs.

Its purse emptied by the controversy between Federal authorities and the State Assembly, which has refused to vote taxes to raise $3,000,000 monthly as Illinois' contribution to its jobless, the commission decided to shut down even its restricted activities effective tomorrow.

Its final resolution, adopted after a lengthy session, provided that remaining Federal funds in its coffers after today's allocation to county committees, be used to pay its employes.

Await End of Deadlock.

Relief headquarters, Commission Chairman Robert J. Dunham said, would continue closed until such time as additional relief funds are made available to it.

Since May 1 the commission's central office has been operating with a skeleton staff because of the dispute between State and Federal authorities over providing funds.

In one of its last acts today the commission scraped together a final $1,200,000 to assure the State's 1,200,000 indigents—many of them suffering from hunger—groceries until next Wednesday.

Commission officials advanced $492,720 to care for 620,000 needy in the 101 Down-State counties and $707,280 to Cook County to carry Chicago's 600,000 clients temporarily.

County agents, notified of their respective grants, were expected to begin immediately the task of furnishing supplies to their distressed clients.

Bills to Come Up Again.

In order to obtain Government grants, the legislature must appropriate $3,000,000 a month as Illinois' share of the relief costs. Bills designed to raise that amount will come before the House of Representatives next Tuesday. They failed of adoption on three previous occasions.

Dunham announced he had taken the $1,200,000 from sums allotted the State by the Government for rural rehabilitation, seed loans and drought relief with the permission of Federal officials. It will be used only to buy food. The chairman urged hospitals and private agencies to provide aid to the destitute who are ill.

"These special activities, such as moving farmers to more productive land, can wait," he said.

He expressed the hope the Legislature would terminate the stalemate before the new moneys run out.

Walworth Seeks Reorganization

Valve Concern Files for Bankruptcy Action.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 10.—The Walworth Co., of Boston, manufacturers of valves, tools, pipe fittings and wrenches, with 4,200 employes, and plants also in Illinois and Pennsylvania, today filed a petition in Federal District Court to reorganize under section 77(b) of the bankruptcy act.

The petition listed assets of $22,080,610 and liabilities of the same figure according to its December 31, 1934, balance sheet.

Through stock ownership, the Walworth Co. controls eight subsidiary companies. The petition lists these as the Westcott Valve Co., East St. Louis, Ill.; Walworth Alabama Co., Attalla, Ala.; Walworth Realty Co., Long Island City, N. Y.; Walworth California Co., San Francisco; Walworth International, a Delaware corporation; Walworth Co., Ltd., of Canada; Walworth Delaware Corporation, Delaware, and Walworth Patents, Inc., of Boston.

Farm Debt Act Declared Invalid

Federal Judge Rules on Law in Texas.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., May 10.—Federal Judge William H. Atwell held the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act unconstitutional today.

Previous lower court rulings on the act have been divided.

Judge Atwell branded the act "a complete striking down of private contract, and a lack of due process (of law) that is without apology."

He issued an order under which the Dallas Joint Stock Land Bank was permitted to foreclose on 144 acres owned by Joe Payne, Hunt County farmer, for a debt of $5,500.

Soviet Rocket Ship To Brave Heavens

Moscow, May 10 (AP).—A Soviet stratosphere committee ordered the construction today of a rocket expected to ascend 50 kilometers (about 34 miles) at a speed of 700 meters a second, or more than twice the speed of sound at a temperature of zero centigrade.

The rocket would take up automatic scientific instruments, which, after reaching the maximum height, would descend by parachutes. Plans for another rocket, said by its inventor to be able to ascend several hundred miles, are being studied.

Love Retold as Miss England Seeks to Collect From Lord

Court Resounds With Endearing Terms as Letters Are Read.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 10.—Letters oozing with endearment enlivened the opening today of the heart balm suit of Angela Joyce, "Miss England" of 1930, against wealthy young Lord Revelstoke.

The defense intimated it is basing its case on the contention that all the letters were written while the young lord was under 21 and a student at Cambridge. He is now 28 and married.

"I am panting to see you again," said one of the letters Revelstoke is alleged to have written Miss Joyce. "You are the supremest, sublimest, superbest girl in the world. I'll never get over you; no, I'll always adore you."

No specific sum was mentioned in the suit by Miss Joyce, who changed her name from Ivy Dawkins and recently went to Hollywood to enter motion pictures. She once described Lord Revelstoke, who was a dashing young undergraduate when she met him, as "the handsomest man in the world," who "adored me like a goddess in the clouds." Lord Revelstoke has since married and Lady Revelstoke sat by his side today.

Other letters read today called Angela "you precious little girl" and advised her: "I think you are the loveliest girl in the world. You looked so utterly sweet in that coat yesterday every time I looked at you you made me go crazy."

Another missive apologized for its incoherency, explaining "apart from the fact you are driving me crazy," the writer was listening to a German lesson at the same time he penned it.

Lord Revelstoke, member of the banking house of Baring Brothers and heir to a fortune, has flatly denied promising to wed Miss Joyce. One of her three attorneys, Neville Laski, said the nobleman "again and again" asked her to marry him, but there was no "impropriety of conduct on the part of Revelstoke as regards this lady." He said Lord Revelstoke "treated her" to hotel expenses when she went to Cambridge.

A packed courtroom followed the case, which was adjourned until Monday. Three women are on the jury.

Big Job Faces 'Hill' —Burning Pink Slips

By the Associated Press.

A congressional committee with a name which delights all visiting humorists appeared destined yesterday to have a large job on its hands.

Treasury officials have about decided to send the famous income tax "pink slips" to the House Committee on Disposition of useless executive papers. It will then be up to Representative Charles J. Colden, of California, who is the committee, to dispose of the mountain of slips, probably in some furnace.

Income tax payers filled out the slips last March in accordance with a law requiring publicity on tax figures, but Congress repealed the law.

A basso, he quickly gained recognition on the concert stage. In 1908, he made his debut at the Metropolitan Opera in Richard Wagner's "Parsifal."

That, too, was the first year of Gatti-Casazza, who retred this season.

After retiring from his career as a singer, Witherspoon directed various musical enterprises and studios. In the last year of Samuel Insull's regime as head of the Chicago Civic Opera, Witherspoon was vice president in charge of music.

Popular Choice.

This past season when discussions began for a successor to Gatti-Casazza, Witherspoon's name was one of the first mentioned.

His selection as general manager was brought about by the support guaranteed to the "Met" by the Juilliard Foundation.

Witherspoon was the choice of the Juilliard trustees for the post. When the trustees guaranteed the sum of $150,000 to underwrite the coming season, with emphasis on Americanization of the Metropolitan customs, the selection of Witherspoon was assured.

Witherspoon's first marriage was to Greta Hughes, the sister of Rupert Hughes, the writer. His second wife was Florence Hinkle, the soprano.

Anne Kresge's 'Suitor' Will Return to Hawaii

San Francisco, May 10 (AP).—Walter James Macfarlane, 29, of Honolulu, who admitted with enthusiasm yesterday on his arrival from Hawaii that he was en route to New York to see Miss Anne Kresge, chain-store heiress, changed his mind today and decided to go back to Honolulu.

"No, it wasn't anything she said to me that changed my plan; nothing like that at all," he said, after telling of reaching her by long-distance telephone in Washington, D. C.

He said Miss Kresge told him she was returning to her New York home last night from Washington.

"As soon as I got back to the farm, I slipped these two into my car and brought them to Huntsville."

Cline said both wounded men had been at the farm for many years.

Warden W. W. Waid and Dog Sergeant F. O. Ross headed for the farm from Huntsville immediately with bloodhounds and horses to aid Capt. B. B. Monzingo in the chase for the convicts, who were reported headed in the direction of Trinity.

A short time later, a convict was stabbed to death in a gang fight of 100 men at the main prison unit here. The victim was Ernest Young, serving a 50-year term for murder.

The disorders occurred less than 18 hours after Hamilton and Palmer had been electrocuted.

Officers 'Wasted' $6,000,000, Stockholders Say.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 10.—Counsel for three stockholders of the Republican Steel Corporation filed suit today in common pleas court, seeking an accounting for and restitution of $6,000,000 in company assets.

The plaintiffs are Francis Whele, Warren, O.; Frances Falkenstein, Bottineau, N. D., and Iva Jensen, Cleveland Heights, O.

Their complaint charged that $6,000,000 was "dissipated, wasted and lost as a direct consequence of the mismanagement, unlawful conduct and negligence of officers and directors."

William P. Belden, counsel for the corporation, said the suit "is entirely without merit."

Auto Strike Peace Prospects Improve

Showdown Parley Is Set in Toledo Today.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 10.—Prospects of an early strike settlement under which approximately 30,000 automotive workers would be restored to their jobs have improved greatly in the last 24 hours, mediators said, as they prepared to leave today for a "showdown" conference in Toledo tomorrow.

Thomas J. Williams, Labor Department conciliator, said he believed the agreement of William S. Knudsen, General Motors Corporation executive vice president, to resume direct negotations with strikers in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor Co., had averted a widespread strike.

Knudsen's decision followed the unique plant election supervised by Edward F. McGrady, First Assistant Secretary of Labor, in which the Toledo plant employes rejected a proposal that they return to work.

'Cheap Money' Policy Is Seen Here to Stay

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Continuance of a cheap money market almost indefinitely was believed yesterday to be forecast by actions of the Federal Reserve Board during the week as well as other developments in the banking field.

The reserve board yesterday approved reduction of the discount rate of the Cleveland Reserve Bank from 2 to 1½ per cent, effective today. It was the last of several such announcements during the week, bringing the discount rates of the reserve banks down to their lowest levels in the history of the reserve system.

During the week discount rates of 2 per cent were established for the Dallas, Richmond and Kansas City reserve banks. They were formerly 2½ per cent. It was the second time this year that the discount rates of the Dallas and Richmond banks had been reduced. Prior to last January the rates of those two banks had been 3 per cent.

No Immediate Effect.

The New York reserve bank has had a discount rate of 1½ per cent since February 2, 1934. Now Cleveland has that rate. All the other reserve banks now have discount rates of 2 per cent, except the Minneapolis bank, which has a rate of 2½ per cent, established last January.

The reduction of the Reserve bank rates will not have any immediate effect, because virtually nobody is borrowing from those institutions. But the reductions place those rates in line with the easy money conditions existing in this country and give added emphasis to the Administration's desire for a decrease in interest rates and the cost of indebtedness.

Still another development pointing toward continuance of low interest rates was action by the House reducing the rate on Land Bank loans to farmers from 4½ per cent to 3½ per cent.

Under the prevailing money rates the Treasury has been able to borrow at an unprecedentedly low cost, and many corporations have been able to refund bonded indebtedness with savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest payments.

Choked With Idle Money.

The reason for this is that the banking system is choked with idle money. This is indicated by the fact that the excess reserves of the member banks now total approximately $2,300,000,000, a record high for this item. The present peak was approximated February 9, but member bank excess reserves declined to about $1,850,000,000 by the middle of March. The excess reserves, however, have started to climb again.

Should the soldiers' bonus be paid at this time under any of the schemes now being proposed on Capitol Hill, excess reserves would be certain to jump much higher. Acceleration of the Government's spending program from borrowed money also will raise the figure.

Thus the member banks of the country as a whole have on balance with the Reserve banks $2,300,000,000 of idle money which they may draw out and lend to customers before it would become necessary for them, as a unit, to borrow from the Reserve banks. Thus the possibility of encouraging member banks to borrow by reducing the discount rate is slight.

Reserve Bank Credit.

Not since the initial period of the Federal Reserve System have the member banks been so free of debt to the Reserve banks as at present. The 12 Reserve banks on Wednesday held only $6,000,000 of discounted bills and $5,000,000 of purchased bills. During the preceding week the Reserve banks did not change their net holdings of these bills.

The total Reserve bank credit outstanding is $2,466,000,000, but of this sum $2,430,000,000 is in the form of Government securities held by the Reserve banks. These securities were accumulated several years ago, the only change taking place in that account in the last week being the sale of $13,000,000 in Treasury notes, offset by purchases of a like amount of Treasury bills.

Despite criticisms to the contrary, bankers contend that they are ready and anxious to lend to any borower with a sound credit rating. They complain, however, that they can not find sufficient borrowers in this class to absorb their idle money.

Industrial Loans Small.

An indication that the spokesmen for the banks in this contention do not deserve the criticism of refusing to aid recovery by lending is found in the results achieved under the Glass loans - for - industry act passed last June, making available roughly $500,000,000 to be loaned through the RFC and the Federal Reserve banks to borrowers unable to obtain needed accommodations through the regular banking channels.

The Reserve Board reports that up to last Wednesday direct industrial loans under that act totaled $26,000,000, while commitments had been made for an additional $18,000,000. The act set aside approximately $240,000,000 for direct industrial loans by the Reserve banks.

The RFC, with $300,000,000 available for the purpose, has loaned $15,059,900 to industrial and commercial business. Thus the RFC and Reserve banks have made industrial loans totaling only $41,000,000 in the last 10 months, while commitments do not run much beyond another $20,000,000. At the time the Glass bill was under debate some members of Congress wanted a fund of at least $1,000,000,000 set up for industrial loans by the Government.

Roosevelt Greets Admiral Byrd at Pier; Guns Boom as 5,000 Persons Hail Explorer

paid his tribute to the men and the machines of the expedition. And so, quickly, the talk swerved from Condor planes and meteors, from cosmic rays and the meaning of the expedition, to what it had meant to him personally. For Richard Byrd had almost died there, alone on the ice. But of that, only silence. But in answer to a jesting question he said he did have a chance to catch up on his reading.

Read Adventure Stories!

He read much of philosophy, he said; and many adventure stories, even as he was having the greatest adventure of his own life. But two books stood out in his mind, read there when there was nothing around him but silence, and ice, and he alone was all that was a living thing. And they were Joseph Conrad's "Victory," W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions."

The first thing he asked as the newsmen came in was "How are things in the country?" In answering, someone mentioned the name of Huey Long. The Admiral threw that off with a gesture, "You hear about him wherever you are, even in Little America."

Then he talked of his radio, of the planes he used, of the old Fairchild he had dug out of the snow on a windswept hillside which ran almost as soon as the motor was warmed. He talked of pressure ridges that he had trouble with and of other "scientific things which are dry as dust."

Learned Something.

"What we did down there," he said slowly, his blue eyes sparkling, "had nothing to do with the price of potatoes and probably will sound like very dry stuff to the layman. But we think we have added something to the sum of knowledge. This was a scientific expedition. It will be months before we know its value, but we think we have learned something."

He told how, in the name of the United States, he had taken possession of 250,000 square miles of territory, which he named for his wife, Marie Byrd. There are minerals there, he said, coal, copper, perhaps silver.

"But they are too hard to get to be of value commercially."

But it was not commerce or science that stood out from his talk. It was the way he told—in short, sharp words, as he puffed his pipe—of the silence.

Studied Weather Conditions.

"I went into the interior," he said, "to make a study of weather conditions there. It is vastly different inland than on the coast. I had weather instruments and kept continuous records of wind velocity and directions. The shack, 123 miles by trail from the base, 110 miles due south of Little America, seemed to be right under the aurora astralis.

"Sometimes these lights," he said, shutting his eyes, "would form an arc, a marvelously beautiful arc, in the skies. Again they would form a straight line."

In this shack, where gasoline fumes almost took his life, he figured it out for himself that "all the urgencies of civilization take the mind off the realities."

"We live in a world of illusion," he said. "I am not certain but that it is a good thing we do. It is sometimes a good thing to lose reality. But I am not sold on continued solitude."

The admiral sat poking his finger at a map. The little cabin was cluttered. On a shelf were books, including his own "Little America," and strangely enough a pamphlet entitled "The Feeding and Care of Babies." Ignoring the confusion of deck and the slow passage—full speed ahead at 6 knots—he went on. He shattered the illusion that penguins alone exist in Antarctica.

"We found that there were bugs in the snow," he said. "Melted pools of ice in the mountains had bugs in them. What kind? We don't know yet, they are being examined. The sea, too, is teeming with life—fish, whales, penguins, seals along the coast. Some of the seals live continually in holes beneath the ice even in winter."

He described meteors falling by the thousands in the crystal clear atmosphere. He told of mapping new lands, of measuring ice, some of which is 9,000 feet thick.

Little America, he said, is over 1,300 to 1,400 feet of water, and within 180 miles of the Pole he found fossils where today there is no living thing, not even a blade of grass. The Antarctic is in the ice age, even as this country was thousands of years ago, he said.

"Everyone asks me, Why this expedition? I think we should learn more about this earth we live on. It seems to me just as important as studying the stars."

Early yesterday morning preparations for the last and most important stages of the journey were begun. The two ships, the pack mule Jacob Ruppert, the intrepid Bear, lay side by side in the Quantico dock. When sleepy newsmen boarded the ship all was confusion, and so it remained as the slow passage up the green-banked river began.

"Where's That Iron?"

On the bridge were Capt. B. Johansen, sailing master of the Bear; Commodore Gjersten, of the royal Norwegian navy, commodore of the fleet; Capt. Robert English, skipper of the Bear, and two river pilots, Capts. Cocks and Dean. Under their expert guidance, the slow wooden ship, which once had penetrated the Arctic on a famous mercy errand, ploughed up the muddy river, the Coast Guard cutter Apache keeping respectfully in the distance. Between Quantico and Alexandria men got their going-ashore clothes ready. An electric iron was in great demand. There was a holiday air aboard ship.

At Alexandria the anchor was dropped, a small boat rowed ashore for ice for the one penguin that was brought up the river. Others were left aboard the Ruppert at Quantico. Several dogs played about the decks. But most were left behind, howling on the Ruppert.

As the ship kicked her way through the thick, muddy waters, yellow brown beneath the green of early summer foliage, Admiral Byrd spent most of the time in his cabin. He had his speech to write.

Post Staff Photos.

But by the time the buoy off Hains Point was sighted, and pleasure craft hovered around like hungry gulls, he was as ship-shape in his white duck uniform as the decks of the ship had miraculously become. There all the lines had been tightened, the yardarms straightened, the ship as clean as months in ice-bound waters would allow.

Captain Greeted With Kiss.

Swinging up the Anacostia River, with the tug Choptank pushing at her starboard quarter, the ship was greeted by a burst of gunfire, the rear admiral's salute. With a minimum of effort the ship was jockeyed to her navy yard berth. Lines were out and she was snugged up. The crowd was pushed far back. The Navy Band burst into music. The United States customs men, firm and silent, walked first up the gangplank.

The first down was Capt. English. He slid down the plank straight into the waiting arms of his attractive wife. He kissed her and enjoyed the repetition several times as movie men cranked, cameramen clicked. Then, after slight delay, the band struck up again, and the grand celebration was on.

First to arrive was Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, on the arm of an aid. As he arrived he was accorded a 19-gun salute. Next came carloads of dignitaries, made up of members of Congress, and they, too, were accorded a naval salute of 17 guns.

President Flashes Smile.

Again guns boomed as Gov. Peery, of Byrd's native State of Virginia, stepped from his car, raven black in formal attire, a high hat. When all had been assembled, the band struck up the "Star-Spangled Banner," and as the final strains died away the guns broke into the 21-gun salute for the President of the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt left his car, stood alone by a broadcasting stand. Admiral Byrd came up, saluted. The two talked together. A microphone was turned on. Briefly Byrd reported "the return of the Byrd Antartic Expedition II," praised the unselfish work of those who made it possible to accomplish "our scientific mission with its 22 point program, having obtained four times as much data as before."

Natty in a gray suit, and standing straight before the speaking stand, the President spoke his familiar voice into the microphone. "* * * To have carried these ship comrades to a dangerous outpost, to have developed your exploratory and scientific work through many months under the most trying conditions, and to have brought them safely home to their country and their friends is an achievement of which the whole Nation is proud. And so, Admiral, I salute you and your comrades, and I extend to you all in behalf of the American people a hearty welcome home."

His face broke into a smile.

"And let me add just one thing from the heart: Dick, I salute you."

President Greets Crew.

Declaring that "you have enlarged the store of human knowledge, you have enriched science, and you have carved your name high in the roster of attainment achieved only by those of heroic mold," Gov. George C. Peery welcomed the admiral on behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Byrd then spoke again, thanking the President and the Governor. Then beginning with Capt. English all the members of the expedition marched quickly by. To each President Roosevelt extended his hand in greeting. Each name he pronounced, and each bearer he found something to say to, if only "glad to see you back."

Then the dignitaries had their innings, greeted the President, bowed to the crowds. Senator David Ignatius Walsh, of Massachusetts, greeted Byrd on behalf of his adopted Commonwealth. Byrd sails for Boston late today, according to present plans.

They Have Tea.

Suddenly out the crowd a gray-haired women in a powder blue suit came up. It was Mrs. Byrd, the explorer's mother. His wife was there, too, in a flowery suit, her face a mask as the Nation extolled her husband.

"Ah, there you are," said the President. "You're going to ride back in my car."

And so the two Mrs. Byrds, the admiral, Mrs. John Boettiger, Sistie and Buzzie Dall, who had watched the whole thing with wonder-widened eyes, and President Roosevelt rode behind screaming sirens to the White House, where they had tea.

Byrd Gets Scroll.

"Anchors Aweigh" sounded out as Admiral Byrd, still in his white uniform, entered the dining room at the Willard Hotel, where he and members of the expedition were guests of honor at a dinner tendered by the National Geographic Society.

Then came the big event of the crowded day, bigger, perhaps, for Washington's dignitaries than to the expedition members for whom the landing at the Navy Yard was the grand finale of their long trip.

Before a large assemblage at Constitution Hall Admiral Byrd received an inscribed scroll in recognition of the collection of data for more than a score of sciences represented on the expedition. The presentation was made by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, before Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, members of Congress and relatives of the returned men.

"Of all living explorers," said Dr. Grosvenor, "Admiral Byrd has seen most of his dreams come true."

Is Called "Pioneer."

Dr. Grosvenor welcomed him as a pioneer of new methods of exploration, a utilizer of radio, airplane, "and other inventions of American genius to study myriad problems of many branches of science."

The scroll received last evening was the third honor from this society given to Admiral Byrd.

Admiral Byrd replied with a prepared address which incorporated most of the points he had previously made to newspaper reporters in the stuffy cabin of the Bear off the Virginia shore. It was his first lengthy address and, he said, his last for some time to come. But when, after leaving this afternoon at 4 p. m. for Boston, he arrives in that city early next week to find a State holiday declared by Gov. James Michael Curley, he may weaken in his decision.

There were no other speeches at Constitution Hall.

Council's Place ... Air Reports, Says President

Roosevelt Approves Publicity After Government Holds Discussions.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday asserted he had no objection to the publication of the various reports of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council on pending New Deal measures, but that it was the council's business to make them public.

The President, however, said he did not think the reports should be made public until they were discussed with the governmental officials having in hand the matter treated by the report. In effect, he confirmed the report in The Post Thursday as to how these reports would be handled.

Mr. Roosevelt commented after the Senate adopted the Steiwer resolution requesting the President to send it the "complete report" made by the Business Advisory Council. The White House last week made public the council's report urging extension of the NRA for two years, but withheld reports on social security, abolition of utility holding companies, centralization of control over the banking structure, taxes and other major questions now pending.

The Senate adopted the Steiwer resolution without objection after it was amended at the suggestion of Democratic Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson to base the request for the "complete report" on whether such action was compatible with public interest.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had a talk on Wednesday with Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the Business Advisory Council, and that they had worked out an excellent method for handling the reports. In the future, committee chairmen of the council, preparing the reports, would discuss them with the Government officials concerned.

The council's report on social security, he said, had been drafted without consultation with Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins. The drafters of the report on taxes, he said, had not consulted with Treasury officials. Thus these committees did not know what purposes Administration officials had in mind.

When the council had checked up with the interested governmental officials, Mr. Roosevelt said, he saw no reason why the reports should not be made public—except, he added, it was not his function but that of the council to make them public.

Novice Only 19 Wins Mahony $50 Art Prize

Julia Eckel and Mitchell Jamieson, young Washington artists' were announced today as winners of the Mahony awards in the Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibition, now on view in the galleries of nine downtown stores and in the auditorium of The Washington Post. The Mahoney awards, carrying with them cash prizes of $50 each, were offered by Felix Mahony, artist and critic of the National School of Fine and Applied Art.

Miss Eckel's colorful still life, "Blue Grass," on view at Lansburgh & Bro., and Jamieson's "Georgetown Shacks," in the exhibition at Palais Royal, were adjudged the best entries in the exhibit not previously awarded prizes.

For 19-year-old Jamieson, the Mahony award was a distinct and thrilling triumph, his winning water color being the first entry he has ever made in competition. Except for a regular high school course, he has studied painting for only one year. Eventually he hopes to become an illustrator.

Julia Eckel is already well known in the world of art, particularly in Washington. She achieved distinction last year through her unusual work for the Public Works of Art project, painting birds and animals for classroom illustration. Three of her more ambitious group paintings —a broadcasting studio, a Salvation Army meeting and a Nego revival—hang in the new Department of Labor Building.

Judges for the Mahony awards were previous prize winners in the exhibition. On the water color committee were Robert Franklin Gates, Mrs. Franklin T. Hammond, jr., and Roy C. Clark. In the oil painting class, Bernice Cross, Eben F. Comins, Reeves Euler and Aurelius Battaglia were judges.

The Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibition, first of its kind to be held in the National Capital, is sponsored by The Washington Post and the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Approximately 1,500 works of art are included. They will be on view until May 20 in the auditorium of The Washington Post and in the galleries of Julius Garfinckel & Co., The Hecht Co., Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bro., W. B. Moses & Sons, Palais Royal, W. & J. Sloane, and Woodward & Lothrop.

Leap From Hotel Kills Son of Ex-Governor

St. Louis, May 10 (AP).—Albert B. White, jr., the son of a former West Virginia Governor, who had been treated here for a mental and nervous disorder, leaped to his death from a hotel window today.

White, 45, a disabled emergency officer of the United States Army, left a letter in his room saying he had been dropped from compensation because of legislation affecting veterans.

Vinson Bill's Revival Pushed; Eccles Denies Bonus Inflation

argued, however, that the Vinson bill would be stronger by 6 to 8 votes on a motion to override a veto.

Huey Long, of Louisiana, a leader of the Senate Patmanites, said he would have nothing to do with the movement.

"It's either the Patman bill or nothin'," he insisted.

Earlier the Louisianan drew a sharp retort from Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, a World War veteran, when Long alluded to the President's war record, in assailing his stand on the bonus. Huey said Mr. Roosevelt drew $10,000 a year as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, but faced no cannon and escaped the hardships of war.

Tydings jumped to his feet with a demand that Long discuss his own war record. Huey escaped military service.

"I have covered that to the satisfaction of my people many times," said Huey.

"Let me cover it a little bit for the Senator," replied Tydings.

"In the Senator's own time he can cover it," said Long.

"You bet I can," declared Tydings, "and nobody can stop me."

"I will not try to stop the Senator."

"You had better not try," Tydings admonished. "You may have to make an argument, and it won't be vocal."

Roosevelt Assailed.

Huey asked why the Marylander should be offended.

"I always become offened when I hear the President of the United States belittled, no matter whether he is a Democrat or a Republican," the Maryland Senator shot back.

Earlier, Long had asserted the President "is leading the Democratic Party to slaughter."

The Louisianan opened his tirade after Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, obtained unanimous consent to consider Monday a committee report on Long's proposed investigation of Postmaster General Farley.

The majority report declared Huey's charges against Farley, alleging efforts by the Postmaster General to get Government contracts for firms in which he was personally interested, were without foundation in evidence.

Duke Sent to Jail On Fraud Charges

"Kim," denied any intent to defraud when he pawned the jewels belonging to the estate of his mother. He received the verdict without emotion and walked slowly away to the jail cell.

During the prosecution's questioning the duke disclosed that the family gold heirloom plate was pawned by his mother.

"What happened about that?" asked the prosecutor.

"It's still there (in pawn)," replied the nobleman.

Denies Fraud Plot.

When his attorney asked if he had any intention to defraud the pawnbrokers, Manchester replied "absolutely not." He maintained he thought he was a tenant for life of the jewelry, left by his mother, Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, the former Consuelo Yznaga de Valle, of Ravenswood, La.

He said money coming to him from his mother's estate in America is a discretionary allowance which his creditors cannot touch, and said he was "always in trouble" with trustees of the fund.

The duke contended he paid interest on the pledged gems and kept insurance up with the purpose of redeeming them. (He was charged with receiving loans totaling £650—about $3,250—on jewelry the prosecution said belonged to his mother's estate, but which he contended was his own.)

The duke has been hailed into court in New York and Montreal on financial difficulties as well as in London. His first wife was the daughter of the late E. Zimmerman, Cincinnati railroad executive, from whom he was divorced in Cuba in 1931. He then wed Kathleen Dawes, English actress.

Prisoner's Bite Kills Officer.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 10 (AP).—Policeman Graham, 40 died today of a prisoner's bite. Graham was bitten March 27, on his day off, when he sought to arrest a motorist for drunkenness after an automobile collision. Early in April the finger was amputated, but blood poison had already set in.

Morgenthau Rebukes Ohio Customs Collector

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, collector of customs at Cleveland, has been asked by Secretary Morgenthau, after an investigation of charges that she engaged in political activity, to "devote herself exclusively to Treasury business in the future."

He said yesterday that Mrs. Pyke, a former Ohio Democratic committeewoman, had been found not to have violated Treasury rules and regulations, but that he thought she had been "slightly indiscreet, which she admitted."

Mrs. Pyke resigned as State committeewoman after Morgenthau forbade Treasury officials from holding political positions.

Senate Leaders Quit Roosevelt In NRA Fight

Parley Binds Own Party to 10-Month Extension in Place of 2 Years.

ed by the Finance Committee not only limits NRA extension to next April, but prohibits codes in intrastate business and eliminates price-fixing, except in mineral resource industries.

Richberg has insisted on a two-year extension and a broader definition of interstate commerce, and the President has supported this stand. In defense of this position, it has been argued it would require nearly ten months to rewrite existing codes and the effect of such tentative action would disrupt industrial regulation and force drastic NRA reorganization.

The Finance Committee has been presented with a memorandum which flatly declares its intrastate commerce exemption "means that no industry in the United States can be subject to regulation by code."

Barkley Effort Fails.

Said to reflect the views of Richberg, the memorandum makes the following observation concerning a restriction in the Clark resolution that "no code of fair competition shall be applicable to any person whose business is wholly intrastate:"

"It is unquestionably unconstitutional for lack of due process to require one member of an industry to meet certain standards while his competitor in the same industry, selling the same goods on the same basis to the same potential customers, is left free of those requirements.

"The above language would mean that within each trade those competitors who cared to organize their business by States could compete with the other competitors free of any limitations or requirements of fair competition."

During yesterday's Senate conference, Senator Allen W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, offered an amendment to the Clark resolution which he said would prevent this "confusion," but strong conference opposition developed.

Limited Time, Excuse.

"Some Senators expressed themselves as personally in favor of amending the joint (Clark) resolution in certain particulars. All agreed, however, that in view of the limited time between now and the date of expiration, June 16, it is probably impracticable to do so. Specific amendments were suggested as follows:

"Extension for a period of two years instead of until April 1. A large majority took the view that this would be calculated to prolong the debate and that it might endanger final action on the subject before June 16.

"Another amendment was suggested relating to the provision that no code of fair competition shall be applicable to any person whose business is wholly intrastate. While a number of the members of the conference thought the incorporation of this provision will result in confusion, it was decided not to press an amendment to the same in the Senate.

Shipstead Urges Six-Hour Day.

"There was a third proposal to amend by incorporating the six-hour-day bill. It was generally recognized that it is impractical to determine the issues in that bill in connection with the joint resolution.

"The chairman announced to the conference that it would be necessary, unless rapid progress is made, to discontinue in the early future week-end recesses and to lengthen the daily sessions."

President Roosevelt, who refused to go along with the Clark resolution at a conference with Senators a fortnight ago, adhered to his original position when informed by reporters of the caucus action. He said the Senate resolution, in his opinion, fails to clarify the NRA law. He reiterated his conviction that a longer extension period is necessary.

In a radio address last night, Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, urged that the Wagner labor disputes bill be incorporated as part of any NRA extension legislation.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, for some time has been considering presentation of this measure as a substitute for Section 7(a), the collective bargaining clause of the NRA act.

Unless this is done, Shipstead said last night, "there will be temporary recovery for big business for a short period, followed by another crash as bad or worse than we had in 1929."

Two Farm Bills Voted in House; Loan Rates Cut

Department Appropriation Action Final; Credit Compromise Due.

With little debate, the House yesterday passed two bills in aid of farmers. One was the Administration measure liberalizing loans of the Farm Credit Administration and the other was the $125,157,983 appropriations bills for the Agriculture Department.

Interest on loans by Federal land banks was cut from 4½ to 3½ per cent for the next fiscal year and 4 per cent for the two years following. This will effect an interest saving of $14,000,000 next year on $1,500,000,000 now outstanding, it is estimated.

The measure adopted was a compromise between the House farm credit bill and the so-called Wheeler amendment approved by the Senate. Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, indicated an agreement has been reached on the compromise and that it will be accepted by conferees.

The bill amends the emergency farm mortgage act of 1933, the Federal farm loan act, the agricultural marketing act, and the farm credit act of 1933. It lifts the $600,000,000 limitation on loans by the land bank commissioner and permits him to lend to prospective farmers up to 75 per cent of the appraised value of property.

Passage of the Department of Agriculture bill completed action of Congress on this measure, which now goes to the White House. The conference report on this bill was accepted by the Senate at almost the same time the House acted. The bill carries appropriations for road building, eradication of farm pests and many other purposes.

Women Stage March To Protest Arming

Cardiff, Wales, May 10 (AP).—Another side of the jubilee picture was given tonight by 500 women, many with babies in their arms, who marched singing over the rugged mountains of Wales en route here to stage a protest demonstration before the Prince of Wales tomorrow.

They will complain against the expenditure of the nation's money for armaments and insist that money collected for the King's jubilee fund be used to aid the unemployed and in maternity and child welfare work.

In all probability most of the women will have trudged in vain, for it is expected they will be halted at the outskirts of the city.

U. S. Moves to Bring Insull From Canada

Toronto, May 10 (AP).—A warrant was issued today on behalf of the United States Government for the arrest of Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utilities magnate.

The warrant said Insull was wanted in Chicago in connection with charges growing out of the collapse of the Insull Utilities Corporation in Illinois.

It came as a preliminary to an application for extradition of Insull, who now resides in Orilla, Ontario.

J. C. McRuer, counsel for Insull, said tonight neither he nor his client had decided whether they would fight extradition.

Only Women Allowed For Pugilist Match

By the Associated Press.

Milford, Conn., May 10.—The daughters of Eve had their fling tonight at a good old-fashioned "ladies' smoker," with never a man to disturb them as they watched a boxing bout between members of their own sex, fencing exhibitions and even a hula dance.

It was the occasion of the annual "blow-out" by the Young Women's Republican Club of Milford—the first at which all males were barred.

Hamilton's Costly Bier Attracts No Visitors

Dallas, May 10 (AP).—The thousands who stormed undertaking parlors a year ago to view the slain outlaws, Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, today ignored in death diminutive Raymond Hamilton, one-time lieutenant of the Barrow-Parker crime team.

The West Dallas hoodlum who rose from a milk bottle snatcher to the Southwest's ranking menace and was electrocuted early today at Huntsville State Prison for the slaying of a prison guard, lay in an expensive casket at a funeral home—unvisited.

Jackson Acquaintance Dies.

Memphis, Tenn., May 10 (AP).—Capt. M. L. Vesey, 97, said to be the last living Memphian who ever shook hands with Andrew Jackson, died today. Capt. Vesey had served as a referee of chancery court here for 45 years. He was six years old when his father introduced him to Gen. Jackson.

Roosevelt Kin Weds Socialite Of Middleburg

Mrs. Olga Sturtevant, of Maryland, Marries James McCormick.

Mrs. Olga Bayne Sturtevant, a distant relative of President Roosevelt, yelt, was married yesterday at Ellicott City, Md., to James McCormick, a leading figure in the Middleburg, Va., fox-hunting set.

The bride, daughter of Dr. J. Breckenridge Bayne, of Oxon Hill, Md., was divorced in Reno last September from Charles Lyon Sturtevant, jr., of this city. She charged cruelty. They were married in 1931 and have one child.

Mrs. McCormick's mother, formerly Mrs. Breckenridge-Bayne, is now Mrs. Sidney Graves, of 2401 Foxhall road northwest, and before her marriage to Dr. Bayne was Olga Roosevelt, the daughter of R. B. Roosevelt, a cousin of the late President Theodore Roosevelt.

In Ellicott City yesterday, McCormick and his bride both said that their families knew of their plan to marry.

Sioux Falls Debaters Win National Contest

Cleveland, May 10 (AP).—Two debaters from Sioux Falls, S. Dak., who will take any side of any question, won the national high school championship today.

The youths, Carl Lundquist, 18, and Herbert Shapiro, 17, defeated Edward Freutel, 17, and Arthur Guy, 18, of Los Angeles, Calif., in the National High School Speech Tournament conducted by the National Forensic League.

Nation's Great Attend Funeral Of Sen. Cutting

17 From House and Senate, Mother of President at New York Rites.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Fellow statesmen, distinguished men from his adopted State, and friends from all walks of life gathered at the bier of Senator Bronson M. Cutting today for Episcopal rites before committing his body to native soil.

Senator Cutting was killed Monday in an airplane crash in Missouri as he was returning from New Mexico, the State he represented, to Washington.

His bronze casket, wrapped in a silk American flag, was carried out of the home of his mother and into St. James Protestant Episcopal Church at 1:30 p. m. (E.S.T.) today.

His mother, an aged woman, followed the hearse in a limousine, got out of it unassisted, and walked up the steps of the church entrance on the arm of an elderly friend. A fine mist of rain fell.

Entering the church alone, just before the casket was carried in, was Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President. She lives nearby.

Services Brief.

The service was brief and without eulogy. More than 1,000 persons were in the church, whose deep chancel was banked with flowers on either side.

Handel's tenth organ sonata was played, followed by three choral preludes of Bach.

The choir entered to take up the amen of the hymn, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

As the casket was brought to the front the rector, the Rev. W. B. Conegan, intoned: "I am the resurection and the life." The family of the Senator took places in reserved pews on either side of the chancel.

The rector read Psalm 39 and scripture selections, and offered prayers. He was assisted by the Rev. Zebarney Phillips, chaplain of the United States Senate.

"I Heard a Voice from Heaven," the anthem of the liturgy of the burial office, was sung. Then came the benediction and the recessional hymn, "Alleluia, the Strife Is O'er."

The coffin was carried out, and the church emptied while the organ pealed forth two more Bach postludes.

Twelve motorcycle police, a guard of honor, led the cortege to Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn for burial in the Cutting family plot.

Many Relatives Attend.

Relatives of the Senator present, besides his mother, included Lucius Wilmerding, Fulton Cutting, C. Haydam Cutting, Lucius Wilmerding, jr., ushers, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Archibald Murray.

Other ushers were Walter Lippmann, Kermit Roosevelt, George W. Martin, Gavin Hadden, Henry W. Bull, Joseph H. Choate, Lawrence C. White, Robert Woods Bliss and Huston Thompson.

The congressional delegation consisted of United States Senators La Follette, Johnson, Hatch, Costigan, Wheeler, Wagner, Thomas, Steiwer, Vandenberg, White and McCarran, and Representatives Dempsey, Plumley, Maas, Merritt, Kvale and Isabella Greenway. All of them were honorary pallbearers.

Fifteen other honorary pallbearers came from New Mexico. They were A. C. McConvery, Dana Johnson, Maurice Miera, Herman Baca, Jesus Baca, Edgar Puryear, Clifford McCarthy, T. M. Pepperday, Brian Boru Dunne, H. H. Dorman, Cyrus McCormick, Severino Trujillo, William Barker, former Gov. Miguel A. Otero and Judge Miguel A. Otero, jr.

125 Police at Church.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, a congressional veteran, also was an honorary pallbearer. The city honored the Senator with a guard of 125 uniformed policemen, who formed a lane from the home of his mother to the church.

This guard stood at attention as the casket was carried from the church and put into a hearse. There were about a thousand people in the street to witness this.

Mrs. Cutting, who followed her son's casket in, also followed it out.

Among those who paid respects with their presence were Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador; Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Miss Mary Parsons and Mrs. Mable Bayard Storey.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., May 10.—With the crown of "Queen Virginia the First" reposing on her brow, Miss Nancy Letitia Peery, 19-year-old daughter of the governor of Virginia, today ruled over the second-day festivities of the first annual Dogwood Festival here.

The crown was placed upon her by former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, in a ceremony witnessed by 5,000 persons on Tenneva Field last night.

This afternoon 25,000 persons witnessed a street parade, 6,000 persons marching in the procession, headed by Miss Peery. The coronation and nine-episode pageant were repeated tonight, bringing the festival to a close.

Patrick Henry Williams Dies.

new shipments of rifles, machine guns, anti-aircraft batteries, tanks and big Junker airplanes to Ethiopia (Abyssinia)."

Mobilization Advanced.

The editor asserted that mobilization in Abyssinia is well under way, especially in two great areas facing Italian Somaliland and Eritrea, Italian colony on the Red Sea, both bordering Abyssinia.

He said the first zone to the south comprises the districts of Harrar, Ogaden, Arussi, Bale, Sidano and Borano, while the second, to the north, facing Eritrea, centers especially in the Tigrai district.

Throughout Abyssinia in the past month stores of arms and ammunition have been amassed, together with new uniforms and foodstuff deposits, it was said. Hangars for the new air force and mechanical units for the motorized divisions are being given special attention.

Powers Anxious Over Abyssinia

By the United Press.

London (Saturday), May 11.—France and Great Britain are considering joint representations to Rome, urging the Italian government weigh carefully the consequences of aggression against Abyssinia, the Daily Telegraph's diplomatic expert reported today.

Both the British and French governments are anxious to assure Premier Benito Mussolini of their anxiety at developments in East Africa, the report said.

They wish also to avoid a situation which they feel inevitably is leading to censure of Italy by the League of Nations Council at its meeting opening May 20, when the Italian-Abyssinian dispute is to come up for consideration.

Tribesmen Bag Plane, Killing Two Britons

Basra, Iraq, May 10 (U.P.).—Two British fliers in the Royal Air Force were killed today when desert tribesmen shot down their plane, flying over the disturbed area of Rumaitha, in the heart of the Euphrates Valley. Troops were rushed to the scene and further trouble was feared.

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the fourteenth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Friday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

At New Haven, hope sprung up in Elizabeth Kent's heart when she gazed at the little girl from the orphanage who might have been her own child, so much did it resemble her. As her husband's skidding car tore down the hill and she saw the helpless child at the bottom—not fear, but hope filled her heart.

There was no question in her mind as to whether her own life should be sacrificed or the life of the child. With one supreme wave of courage, Elizabeth Kent spun the steering wheel. The car crashed into the wall! Her husband escaped with only a broken arm. But when the ambulance reached the foot of the hill, Elizabeth Kent was dead!

Three months later a man with a mourning band on his sleeve stood in a courtroom. He was handed a paper which gave him the legal right to adopt the little child he was later to name Elizabeth. The adoption papers described her as a child of 4, with deep blue eyes and chestnut hair.

Do not miss the next in this gripping series entitled "Mercy Murder" Monday at 5:30, from WJEJ.

Two Takoma Women Bruised in Car Crash

Mrs. Helen Elizabeth Taylor, 613 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and her mother, Mrs. Annie Cully, same address, suffered cuts and bruises yesterday morning when Mrs. Taylor's car ran into a telephone pole at Blair road and Kennedy street northwest.

Driving north on Blair road, Mrs. Taylor tried to avoid a car driven by Mrs. Clyde J. Nichols, 4004 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Cully were treated at Washington Sanitarium.

Dam at Vienna Is Authorized As Safety Step

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Town Council of Vienna, Va., has authorized immediate construction of a dam across the creek which runs through the center of the town, which will form a reservoir and provide fire protection for the business section of the town. The dam will be located north of the bridge on Church street.

The council took this action at the request of the local Volunteer Fire Department. Application has been made by the town to the Public Works Administration for funds to install a town water system. The firemen pointed out that even if the money was made available by the Federal Government, there would be a delay pending construction of the system and that the dam would supply the immediate fire protection.

The town treasurer was instructed to take the necessary action to collect delinquent corporation taxes amounting to about $3,500. The town clerk, F. A. Wilcox, told the council that many persons who were unable to pay during the pas tfew years because of the depression are now refusing to pay unless the collection is made on all delinquents.

Members of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association now in annual session at Mount Bernon, will make a pilgrimage to historic Pohick Church, on the Richmond-Washington highway, tomorrow morning.

The delegation, headed by Mrs. Alice Richards, of Maine, regent, will leave Mount Vernon by automobile at 10:30 a. m., and will be accompanied by Harrison H. Dodge, superintendent of Mount Vernon. Holy Communion will be celebrated at the services, which will be held at 11 o'clock, and will be conducted by the Rev. C. A. Latngston, rector of Pohick Church.

J. E. Bauserman, principal of Groveton Elementary School, announces that the following pupils attained the honor roll during the last six-weeks period:

Dust Storms at Sea Reported by Navy

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 10.—Once the mention of dust storms at sea was a standard joke of mariners, to be followed by gales of laughter. But the Naval Hydrographic Office here has received reports of —yes—dust storms at sea.

Seven steamships have notified the Government department of the phenomenon, and Clarence Shomber, maritime expert in its Baltimore office, is passing the information to masters of other vessels.

The craft, an American freighter, encountered the dust in the Gulf of Mexico while the Western "black blizzards" were raging. One vessel got into the middle of it, found visibility reduced to a quarter of a mile and anchored with its foghorn booming a sour note through the displaced Western landscape.

Government Seeks To Halt Va. Dam

U. S. Files Suit Against Appalachian Company.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., May 10.—Prolonged litigation involving erection of a power dam on the New River has entered another phase with the filing in Federal District Court of a suit by the United States Government against the Appalachian Power Co.

The suit seeks a temporary injunction to halt erection of the dam near Radford pending a hearing, and an injunction after the hearing to restrain the company from any action on the project without procuring a license from the Federal Power Commission.

The Government contends the dam, begun last June, "constitutes a trespass upon a public highway of commerce" and that it would impair an investment of $25,000,000 in navigation improvements on the Kanawha and New Rivers by the Government.

Wheat Meetings Set.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., May 10.—C. W. Hubbard, county agent for Northumberland County, has announced the following meetings of farmers of the county to be held to discuss the wheat referendum: Heatheville Courthouse, today, 7:30 p. m.; Callao High School, Saturday, at 7:30 p. m., and Wicomico High School, Monday at 7:30 p. m.

Pastor Who Led Whisky Raids Is Unfrocked at Myersville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Myersville, Md., May 10.—The Rev. Robert J. Ridgely, of Myersville, who for some years has been the Nemesis of moonshiners in the mountain sections of north Middleton Valley, and who has personally led Federal agents in numerous raids on illicit liquor stills, has been unfrocked as a minister of the Church of the Brethren, according to information obtained here yesterday. While admitting that Mr. Ridgely had been notified to discontinue serving as pastor of the Harmony Church of the Brethren, members of the official board of the Myersville, Grossnickle's and Harmony churches denied that his activities against moonshiners was the cause of the action. One member admitted, however, that the publicity attendant to the raids was not liked by the board.

The Rev. Charles N. Frushour, the Rev. Irving R. Stottlemyer, of the Grossnickle Church, and the Rev. Clarence R. Bowman, of the Myersville church, all said that the action was the result of a marriage ceremony performed March 31 by Ridgely at his home in Myersville, when, it is alleged, he knew that he had no authority to perform marriages.

It was further stated Ridgely had been ordained as a minister of the church about 10 years ago, but that his ordination had been revoked by the ministerial board for the eastern district of Maryland five years ago, after charges of conduct unbecoming a minister had been preferred against him. This action, according to the Rev. Mr. Frushour, has never been rescinded by the ministerial board.

After Ridgely's ordination had been revoked, the Rev. Mr. Frushour said, he was ordered to discontinue preaching, which he did until about a year ago, when he assumed the pastorate of the Harmony Church. No action was taken by the official board, however, it was said, until after the Rev. Mr. Ridgely officiated at a marriage. He was then requested to discontinue preaching, it was stated, but continued to hold services until last Sunday, when the Rev. Mr. Frushour was ordered to fill the Harmony pulpit. Although the Rev. Mr. Ridgely had announced that he would preach Sunday morning, he made no resistance and remained in the audience during the services.

Because of the Maryland law which authorizes only ordained ministers to perform marriage ceremonies, the official board of the church has ruled that the young couple will be officially notified that it will be necessary to have a second ceremony performed.

Members of the official board say that the Rev. Mr. Ridgely filed application Monday with the ministerial board to be reinstated as a minister of the church, but so far no date has been fixed for a hearing on the request.

Drivers Submit To Auto Tests In Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The semi-annual inspection of automobiles now is being made and will continue to the end of the month.

Every automobile owner is required to take his car to an automobile-testing station, where it will be given a rigid examination as to brakes, gearing, windshield wiper, horn, lights, rear-view mirror and other safety devices. The owner is required to pay only for adjustments found necessary.

Designated testing stations in Arlington County are: Clarendon—Kirby Motor Co. and Al's Master Service Station; Cherrydale—Toone's Garage, Greenwood Garage and Jack Kemp's Service Station; Ballston—Elmer C. Howell's Service Station; Arlington—Alcova Motor Co.; Rosslyn—Windridge and Handy Motor Co. and the Arlington Motor Co.

County Manager Roy S. Braden announced that the week of May 27 has been designated by the Arlington County officials as "Clean Up Week." A request is being made to all citizens to put forth every effort during that week to remove trash and rubbish and to otherwise improve the appearance of their property.

County trucks will be available to collect the trash and deposit it without cost to the property owners. A schedule of collections will be published later, showing on what days trucks will be available at various localities.

Citizens' associations and other organizations are asked to cooperate in making "Clean Up Week" a success, to the end that the county will be a better place in which to live.

The executive committee of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. Harry K. Green in Clarendon, completed plans for the organization meeting to be held the afternoon of May 22 at the Arlington Presbyterian Church.

The meeting will start at 12:30 p. m. and will be preceded by a luncheon. Candidates for the State Senate and the House of Delegates will be invited to present their platforms.

The committee voted to recommend to the organization that special meetings be arranged during the next few months to afford an opportunity to all candidates for county offices to be heard prior to the November election.

Six students were selected as winners yesterday in the semifinals of a contest held in the Washington and Lee High School under the auspices of the Better Housing Administration.

They are Ida J. Dagger, Maxine Cardwell, Berna Bergeson, Charles Dild, Mark Sherrill and Eugene Caffey. These six will compete in the county-wide contest to be held May 16 in the Washington High School auditorium.

The judges yesterday were Mrs. Jessie Roberts, president of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County; Miss Lois Stone, teacher of economics at Arlington Hall Junior College for Girls, and J. Lee Price, realtor, of Oak Crest, Arlington County.

Continuing his series of sermons illustrated by tableaus staged by members of the congregation, the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell will preach at the Clarendon Baptist Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Motherhood" and at 7:45 p. m. on "The Prodigal's Mother."

Receipts Tax Agents Visit Chestertown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., May 10.—In order to help merchants and others to unravel the intricacies of the 1 per cent gross receipts tax law, recently passed by the General Assembly, representatives of the office of State Comptroller William S. Gordy are visiting county seats for conferences.

They are F. Guy Murray and Carroll E. King and came here today to stay until tomorrow afternoon, making their headquarters in the office of clerk of the Kent County Circuit Court.

All Mt. Rainier Churches Plan Mothers' Rites

Services at Christian and St. John's to Pay Honor to the Oldest.

Special services will mark observance of Mother's Day by Mt. Rainier churches tomorrow, including St. John's Episcopal Church and the Christian Church, where rites will center around the oldest mothers in the two congregations.

Mrs. Mary S. Brown, 77, mother of 11 children and grandmother of a like number, will be honored at St. John's, where a special candlelight service will be conducted at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, rector.

A feature of the service will be a roll call including the names of all members of the parish. As each name is called a candle will be lighted in her honor. Candles also will be lighted in memory of mothers who have passed away and for others who are not members of the parish, on request. Mrs. Brown will light the first candle in honor of all members.

Choirs to Be Combined.

The combined boy and adult choirs, under direction of Mrs. L. P. Harsch, will furnish special music. Miss Mary Lee Clendenin will be organist.

Special tribute to motherhood will also be paid at Mount Rainier Christian Church at the evening service by presentation of a basket of flowers to the oldest mother attending. The Rev. Fred Miller, pastor of the church, will preach on "Mary, the Mother of Jesus." Special music will be played by the church orchestra.

Appropriate observances will mark services of the Bible class, under direction of Willford H. Dunn and Thomas J. Llewellan, and the Sunday school, under direction of Mrs. H. Langford.

League Plans Reception.

Trinity Lutheran Mission will observe the day with a special service at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Edwin Pieplow will deliver a sermon entitled "A Christian Mother, God's Loving Proxy."

The Young People's Walther League will give a reception following the service in honor of mothers of the congregation, under direction of Henrietta Perley. Taking part in the program will be Mrs. Hugh Koontz, Dora Scott, Barbara Maschauer, Mrs. Charles Richelt, Carlton Heyser and Philip Schwiesow.

Mother's Day will be observed at the 11 o'clock service at the Methodist church, when the Rev. R. K. Nevitt will deliver a sermon entitled "Behold Your Mother." Special music will be sung by the church choir.

Recognition of the day will also be given a place in services at St. James Catholic Church and First Baptist Church.

Drive to Remove Cedars Launched in Culpeper

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 10.—A movement to eliminate the native cedar trees from Culpeper County, especially those along main highways, has been launched by the Culpeper Lions Club.

The agricultural committee of the club feels that it opens a way to enhance the beauty of property by substituting trees of more rapid growth, and will cut the fruit loss from cedar rust, which has been destructive in apple orchards wherever cedars appear.

Orders in Code Are Described At Liquor Trial

Convicted Alcohol Baron Testifies in Roanoke Conspiracy Case.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 10.—Facing the rest of his five-year sentence to Atlanta prison, 58-year-old John W. Rosser, Lynchburg liquor baron, who was sentenced and fined $8,000 last December, denied in the United States Court for the Western District here this afternoon that he hoped for clemency as the result of his revelations concerning traffic in Franklin County liquor.

As the Government attempted to weave its net tighter about alleged liquor conspirators, charged with violating internal revenue laws, Rosser told of sending telegrams in code ordering loads of whisky; of sugar hauled from Lynchburg to Franklin County by Ikey Levine, alleged co-conspirator who would not testify yesterday for fear of incriminating himself; of promised "protection" and the return of an automobile for his son through a defendant, T. Roosevelt Smith, who, Rosser said, declared "him and the Commonwealth stood well together."

Smith delivered thousands of gallons of liquor to the "baron" in the last year and a half, it was said.

The 100th Government witness, Leo C. May, alias "Gummy" Coleman, of Roanoke, was on the stand when the third week of the trial ended.

Maj. Wonson Heads Staunton Academy

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., May 10.—The board of trustees of Staunton Military Academy today announced the resignation of Robert T. Hall as superintendent and the selection of Maj. Roy W. Wonson. The resignation of A. E. Everett as headmaster also was made known.

In revealing the changes, which became effective May 1, trustees said no far-reaching changes in policies of the academy are contemplated.

Maj. Wonson, who came to S. M. A. in 1910, directed the academic department under the late Col. Thomas H. Russell from the death of Col. William H. Kable in 1920.

Accused Mother Pleads Poverty

Woman Held for Checks Recites Family Cares.

She has five children. Her husband, a painter, has been unable to work for several years because of nervous trouble. She has to meet a rent bill of $30 a month; food for the family, with children ranging from 3 months to 13 years in age, amounts to $2 a day, and medicines and incidentals add $3 more to the bills every week.

That, the police reported, was what Mrs. Olive Ropper, 35, of Ballston, Va., sobbed yesterday when they asked her:

"Why did you do it?"

She had been arrested in a Seventh street department store Wednesday after proffering a check to pay for her purchases. Twenty other storekeepers went to police headquarters yesterday to identify her as the woman who had passed bogus checks in their establishments during the last few months, totaling about $230, none more than $25, and most of smaller denominations.

She will face trial today in Police Court.

Laurel School Circus Places First at Fete

Depiction of a circus by the Laurel Graded School won leading place yesterday as Prince Georges County graded schools held their fifth annual music festival at College Park.

Crowning of Eloise Castel, 12, of Edmonston, as Queen of the May climaxed the afternoon of pageantry, in which eight schools participated.

The festival was opened with the singing of "America the Beautiful" by the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades. This was followed by "Home on the Range" and "Old Faithful."

Three folk dances, "Pop! Goes the Weasel," "Captain Jinks" and "Cschbogar," were given by the fifth grades of each school. The fourth grades gave "Dutch Couple," "Bleking" and "Ace of Diamonds."

Special numbers were given by University Park, Bowie and Marlboro schools. The first grades then sang four songs.

Grades four, five, six and seven followed with four folk dances. The second grades, in brilliant costumes, took the floor of the Ritchie Coliseum to sing four songs.

Mrs. Kathryn Reidy directed the pageant. Piano accompanists were Angela Dondero and Mattie Mae Williford.

Annapolis Alarmed By Scarlet Fever

'Quarantine' Orders at Academy Issued.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 10.—A number of cases of scarlet fever in and near Annapolis, together with isolated cases among children of naval officers, so alarmed Naval Academy authorities today that a dance scheduled for tomorrow night has been called off, and orders issued bordering on quarantine restrictions for the regiment of midshipmen.

Officials of the academy denied that there are any cases among families living in the reservation, but said it was necessary to take precautionary steps. Midshipmen have been prohibited until further notice from visiting theaters and other similar meeting places. Officials explained that the move would apply only to indoor assemblages, and would have no effect on the athletic program tomorrow afternoon.

Dog Show in Virginia Draws Many Entries

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., May 10.—Judging from the scores of entries already received, the dog show to be held in the City Armory tomorrow, under the auspices of the University League, will be the most successful ever held by th league.

Twenty classes are listed on the day's program, which will be open at 1 o'clock p. m. First, second and third ribbons will be awarded in each class, and trophies and prizes will go to winners of first and second places. Dr. Daniel E. Buckingham, of Washington, who acted as judge at last year's show, will serve in the same capacity this year.

Newbroughs Celebrate 60th Year of Marriage

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., May 10.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Newbrough at Harmony Grove was the scene of the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. Their children present were Mrs. Charles B. Stark, of Morgantown; T. C. Newbrough, of Fairmont, and J. W. Newbrough, of Uniontown.

Both Mrs. Newbrough and her husband are members of the families that settled in this section long before West Virginia became a State. The couple has occupied the Newbrough homestead in Harmony Grove for more than half a century.

New Orders Reopen Martinsburg Plants

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 10.—Two industries here resumed operations here today.

The Dunn Woolen Co., manufacturing woolen cloth, announced a Government order and also order for some cloth for an automobile company. The plant, which employs several hundred poeple, has been idle for weks.

The Interstate Amlesite Corporation, manufacturers of road surfacing material, resumed operations upon receipt of new orders.

'Uncle George' Ford, Veteran Guard at Mt. Vernon, Is Buried

Negro Well Known for Years He Stood at Washington Tomb.

In a far corner of the spacious estate at Mount Vernon, a handful of colored men and women, many of them old and wrinkled, a few clutching little children tightly by the hand, mourned and wept yesterday afternoon.

They were burying Uncle George—George Ford, whom thousands of tourists have known as the tall, erect colored man, gray of hair and clear of eye, who had stood guard next to the weather-beaten tomb of President George Washington on the bluff above the Potomac for the last 15 years.

It was a simple ceremony there in the tiny colored settlement called Gum Springs. Only a few friends attended. Uncle George's two daughters—Mrs. Mattie Chase and Mrs. Ivy Botts, both of Washington, the latter suffering from heart trouble—trudged heavily in the short funeral procession.

Next to his wife they buried Uncle George in the Ham Baptist Church Cemetery.

So a life had ended where it had begun and where most of it had been lived. Uncle George was born on the estate some 77 years ago when it was owned by a grandnephew of the first President, John Augustus Washington.

The President's descendants left, but Uncle George stayed on. When the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association took over the estate to re-equip and restore it, Uncle George took up the task of escorting tourists through the mansion, telling them about its features. Then, 15 years ago, he took his more famed post.

For eight months he had been suffering from kidney trouble. Three weeks ago he had to forsake the guard. Wednesday he died in Freedmen's Hospital here.

No successor has been selected and today a colored neighbor stands guard by the tomb.

2 Sixth Grade Spellers Score In County Bees

Eugene Stossel Victor in Warren; Maud Edwards in Stafford.

Two sixth grade pupils triumphed over older contestants in spelling bees in the county divisionals, earlier this week, of the national spelling bee, sponsored locally by The Washington Post.

Eugene Harold Stossel, a sixth grade pupil, won first place, and Flora Virginia Jenkins, eighth grade, second, in the Warren County match.

In Stafford County, Maud Edwards, sixth grade, placed first, and Mary Hickle, eighth grade, second.

In King George County, which also announced its winners yesterday, Warren Rollins, eighth grade, and Clara Staples, of the same grade, won first and second place, respectively.

Details of the three matches follow:

Warren Contest Close.

In the Warren County match Monday in the high school at Front Royal, the contest was close when the spellers were reduced to two until Flora Jenkins left an "s" out of the word "concession," giving her second place and making Eugene Stossel the victor. Both pupils are from the Warren County High School. This is the first county match in which both winners have come from the same school.

Q. D. Gasque, principal, presided. Henry C. Coe, of the school faculty, pronounced the words, and the judges were Mrs. Carol Walter, Col. John C. Boggs, Randolph-Macon Academy, and Mrs. Coe.

Pupils participating, all of whom will receive certificates from The Post, were: Justine Weaver and Millard Morrison, Bentonville; Charles McLean, Browntown; Louise Fogle, Buckton; Gladys Mills and Lillian Mills, Harmony Hollow; Edward Heflin and Irene Nickols, Linden; Charlotte Licklider, Milldale; Madge Sargent and Donald Downall, Reliance; Jane Griffith and Mina Stickley, Riverton; Maynard Robinson and Mona Robinson, Water Lick, and Eugene Stossell, Elsie Stossell, Virginia Jenkins and Ann Padgett, Warren County High School. The number of representatives was apportioned according to the attendance of the competing schools.

King George and Stafford Counties held their matches Tuesday in Falmouth High School. William P. Bolton, principal, presided; J. M. H. Willis, former mayor of Fredericksburg, presided; and the judges were C. A. Edwards, principal, College Heights Training School; Miss Ethel Nash, principal, Fredericksburg elementary school, and Mrs. D. P. Tillar, head of the English department of Fredericksburg High School.

Champion in Sixth Grade.

The Stafford County match was held first. Maud Edwards, champion, is a sixth grade pupil at New Hope, Mrs. Beryle Willis, principal. Mary Hickle, second place winner, is in Mrs. Catherine Robey's eighth grade at Falmouth.

School winners who took part were Robbie Curtis, Howard Jett and Maude Edwards, New Hope; John Pumphrey, Peggie Shuler, James Byram, James Habina, Agnes Anderson and Pearl Schooler, Stafford High; Audrey Snellings, Dorothy Jordon, Mary Hickle, Alice French, Kathryn Jones and Virgil Harris, Falmouth High.

After this match, the King George contest was held. Warren Rollins, who won, is in Miss Elva Mason's eighth grade at the King George School; Clara Staples, second, is in the same grade at Dahlgren School, and was coached for the contest by Miss Hutt. Pupils participating were Warren Rollings, Florence Bradenburg, Elizabeth King, Grade Hamlet and Allen Cox, King George School; Clara Lee Staples, Lola Potter, Florence Newton, Marjorie Burgess, Lillian Berry and Austin Payne, Dahlgren; Lillian Foster, Mary E. Lee, Hattie Mardus, Shiloh; Henry Ashton and Jane Garnett, Madison.

Winners Announced.

Montgomery County—Somerset, Mary Ann Moffett, Henry Bernhardt, Boyd Geron and William Graham; Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, Harrison Fasscer and Bonnie Throckmorton, seventh grade; Jane Chapin and Donald Tucker, eighth grade.

Anne Arundel—Glen Burnie, Allen Kellenberger and Bernard Kiessling. Two other spellers from this school have been announced, making the six allotted.

All school winners, regardless of whether they are registered before or after their county matches, will receive certificates from The Post.

Circuit Docket For Frederick Lists 172 Cases

Court Opens May Term Monday; Suit for $50,000 Comes Up.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 10.—One hundred seventy-two cases, including about a dozen from other counties, are marked for trial at the May term of the Circuit Court which begins on Monday. The Peoples Liquidating Corporation appears as plaintiff in 14 cases of attachment on judgment involving debtors of the Central Trust Co., for which it is liquidating agent. The largest single suit is that of Virgil R. Eaton, this city, to the use of the Aetna Life Insurance Co., insurer, and Markell and Ford, employer, in which damages aggregating $50,000 are sought from the Ebert Ice Cream Co. and Glenn A. Stine, employe. The suit is the outgrowth of an accident June 28, 1934, in which Eaton was struck by a truck belonging to the ice cream company and driven by Stine. Eaton was seriously injured.

Another suit is that of Mrs. Alice R. Berkman, widow of Lloyd R. Berkman, Deerfield, who seeks $25,000 damages from Ralph W. Miller and Paul C. Fry, proprietors of a saw mill, from whose truck Berkman fell last February and was killed.

A fatal automobile accident near Plane No. 4, December 9, 1933, resulted in two suits of $10,000 damages each, brought by Wilbur Evans and Earl Beatty, both of Philadelphia, against James E. May, Hagerstown. Both allege serious injuries. William H. Bradley, Hagerstown, formerly of this city, was killed.

A total of $17,000 damages is sought in suits brought by Alfred Zekial, Matilda Zekial, Edward Hall and Grace Hall, all of Baltimore, against Stanley J. Graham, as the result of an automobile accident. Judgment had previously been obtained for the plaintiffs.

Several cases are docketed from Allegany and Washington counties.

Higher Intrastate Schedules Upheld

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 10.—Emergency freight surcharges on intrastate shipments in Virginia paralleling increases granted on interstate freight by the I. C. C., were approved for Virginia carriers today by the State Corporation Commission, which specified important exceptions to the national rate structure.

Exemptions made by the State body were on leaf tobacco, peanuts, ground limestone and tanbark, which it held should receive the same treatment other agricultural and forest products did in the I. C. C. decree. The Virginia increases take effect May 19 and expire June 30, 1936.

Peyton to Step Out As Democratic Leader

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 10.—"County offices for county people" seems to have been the decree of the Augusta Democratic committee, and as a result, L. W. H. Peyton has made known that he will resign as chairman.

Mr. Peyton, a resident of Staunton, has long served as chairman of the county Democratic committee. It is expected that the committee will be called into session within the next 30 days to name a successor.

Hagerstown to Equip Police Cars With Radio

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 10.—City and county police are planning to install one-way radio call systems on automobiles they operate.

Officials inspected systems used at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds and in Baltimore, but are of the opinion that installation of two-way systems would be too expensive and plan to start off with a one-way system from headquarters to cruising police.

Brakeman Is Accident Victim.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 10.—Injured at work at the Blair Limestone Co.'s plant, Thomas Stephenson, 28, of Blairton, W. Va., was brought to a hospital here yesterday, suffering from a mangled arm, probable fracture of a leg and multiple bruises. Relatives said Stephenson, a brakeman on the company's narrow-gauge railroad, was jarred from a car and three empty trucks passed over portions of his body.

John Snyder, Once Official, Dies of Stroke

Winchester Business Man Lives Only for Day With Paralysis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 10.—John H. Snyder, 68, a native of Chambersburg, Pa., and for many years a prominent citizen of Winchester, died at his home here this afternoon from a stroke he suffered yesterday.

Mr. Snyder came to this city 45 years ago and engaged in the plumbing business. In addition to his business interests, he was active in Democratic circles and served several terms on the city council, being named president. He was active in Masonic circles.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Bertie Oyler, of this city; one daughter and one son.

Richard T. Mahome.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 10.—Funeral rites were conducted at Lynchburg today for Richard Thompson Mahone, retired business man, for 40 years connected with the Frick Co., of Waynesboro, Pa., who died yesterday at his home near the university, after an extended illness.

In 1898 he married Miss Mattie Worthington, of Albemarle County. She survives, with three children, two sons and one daughter—Worthington, Mahone, of New York City; R. T. Mahone, of Petersburg, Va., and Mrs. R. Watson Sadler, of this city. Mr. Mahone also leaves his mother, Mrs. Margaret Mahone, of Lynchburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Evans, of Richmond, and Mrs. Betty Cheatham, of Lynchburg.

Harry N. Ashby.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., May 10.—Harry N. Ashby, who died in Baltimore following a heart attack and was buried in the Arlington National Cemetery addition in that city, was a native of Augusta County. He had been located in Baltimore for some years and was commander of one of the American Legion posts there.

He leaves his father, Turner Ashby, of Churchville, this county; two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Ralston and Mrs. Harry Taliaferro, both of Churchville, and three brothers, Marshall and Woodie Ashby, of Churchville, and Claude Ashby, of Kings Ferry, N. Y.

Federal Relief Wage Cut in Loudoun County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 10.—The Federal emergency relief committee in Loudoun this week ordered the wage scale cut from 20 to 15 cents per hour for persons engaged in relief work, effective immediately. W. H. Whitmore, chairman of the board of supervisors, and T. M. Fendall, member of the committee, signed the order.

It is said that farmers complained of difficulty in obtaining labor with the FERA paying 20 cents an hour, a price the growers said they could not afford to pay.

Return From The Antarctic.

The comparative indifference with which the general public turned out to greet Rear Admiral Byrd on his return from the Antarctic must, paradoxically, be construed as a high compliment for the commander and his men. Quite plainly, the public has tired of blizzards and ice. The business of exploring the bleak wastes of the South Pole has in the popular mind lost its aura of romance. And this is so because the terrors and dangers of the undertaking have been so happily brought under control. To spend a year or so in such an inhospitable location calmly collecting records and data appears to be a simple enough matter. In truth, of course, it is far otherwise. It is only the outstanding success with which every detail of the carefully planned program has been fulfilled that makes it appear so.

It would be interesting to compare the notes of this second expedition with those of Nansen, Peary or Washington's own Gen. Greeley. The radio alone, by which regular conversations with New York headquarters were maintained, has completely revolutionized the technique of distant exploration. Tractors now displace dog sleds to a great extent; airplanes have superseded snowshoes. The camera, electricity, modern food-packing—all have changed the picture. Thus mankind's advances are won in an arithmetical progression: one salient gained, ten more open up in prospect.

But throughout, success or failure has hinged in the last analysis on the human element. And even though few heroics welcome the returning band today, this fact has not been forgotten. Their courage and ability can not be doubted. As to the extent to which these qualities have here advanced the cause of civilization, it is difficult for the layman to estimate. At least the lives of the Byrd expedition members were risked and their ingenuity tested in a venture that looked toward a more constructive goal than that contemplated by the 200 heroic naval aviators now similarly hazarding their lives in complicated war games over the Pacific.

Impractical Expedients.

The tentative recommendations of the textile committee of the President's Business Advisory Council are partly explained by the character of the committee. It is composed, for the most part, of cotton textile manufacturers. This committee has demonstrated that its chief concern is emergency relief to that industry rather than development of a consistent national policy.

If it is found desirable to curtail textile imports from Japan, friendly negotiations for that purpose would be, as the committee suggests, the wiser course. For the most part, trade between the United States and the Orient is supplementary, rather than competitive. Nothing can be gained and a great deal might be lost by disrupting this mutually profitable exchange of goods. Japan is already reported to be easing the pressure of her cheap cotton cloth on the American market. If the matter is left in the hands of the State Department, there is every reason to expect that satisfactory adjustments can be amicably made.

With the other two policies outlined by spokesmen for the committee it is much more difficult to agree. Abolition of the processing tax on cotton, while funds are being drawn from the Treasury to pay farmers for acreage curtailment, would set up an extremely dangerous precedent. Any group in economic difficulties might then demand, with equal justice, the right to draw upon the Treasury to offset losses. The AAA is well-advised in its opposition to this scheme, for it would certainly signalize the doom of the adjustment program. Processing taxes on all commodities would have to be eliminated if cotton should be exempted. The resulting strain on the regular budget would in all probability bring benefit payments to an end. This may be a desirable outcome, but it is not the desirable way to achieve it.

The idea of subsidizing cotton textile exports is equally controversial. Special bounties of this sort, paid by one government, nearly always lead to the erection of higher trade barriers or outright embargoes by other countries. An export subsidy policy would not only risk defeat of its own purpose, but would throw the State Department's reciprocal-tariff program into confusion.

It is unfortunate that the textile committee has approached its admittedly difficult problem from a narrow rather than a national viewpoint.

Changed For The Better.

As passed by the House, the Administration's banking bill does not effect such a radical metamorphosis of the Federal Reserve system as many advocates as well as foes of the measure assume. Controversy has centered chiefly about Part II of the bill, which greatly increases the powers of the Federal Reserve Board to control credit policies and also strengthens it on the administrative side.

Qualifications for appointment to the board have been altered to give greater freedom to the President in the selection of members. In its original form, the bill provided that the governor of the board should hold office at the pleasure of the President and upon retirement from that position should cease to be a member of the board. Very properly, this section has been modified and the revised bill now permits a retiring governor to serve out his term. As a means of preserving the independent status of the board, and preventing the governor from falling under executive domination, this change is a move in the right direction. In practice, of course, it may prove to be of minor importance.

Many of the provisions relating to banking procedure are in no sense new or startling, although they mark a break with precedent. The provision which makes sound assets a basis for borrowing by member banks, thereby eliminating eligibility requirements, is an outgrowth of emergency conditions which forced abandonment of tried tests. Similarly, changes in the provisions regulating note issues have ceased to be important, since notes are for all practical purposes a bond-secured, inelastic currency which does not expand or contract with reference to commercial demands for credit. The really debatable question is whether a situation growing out of an emergency should become the basis for permanent revision of the Federal Reserve law.

Certainly the present system of divided responsibility for the conduct of open-market operations is both cumbersome and unsatisfactory. The Reserve Board is the logical agency for assuming that responsibility, especially if the intention is to make it a more powerful instrumentality of credit control. Under the bill as passed, an open-market committee is created, consisting of an advisory group of five representatives of the Federal Reserve banks. This change is an improvement over the original proposal to establish a committee consisting of the governor of the Reserve Board, two other members of the board, and two bank governors who would have been in control of open-market policies. This would have perpetuated the system of divided responsibility under conditions that clearly indicated future disharmony in acute form within the Reserve Board.

Another change for the better was made in the original bill by giving the Federal Reserve Board discretionary power to regulate the volume of real estate loans of member banks and require them to follow sound practices. The dangerously liberal provisions for an expansion of such loans are to a large extent counteracted by these saving reservations. On the other hand, the chances for unification of the country's banking system have been seriously impaired by permitting the benefits of the permanent system of deposit insurance to be extended to non-member State banks. This concession to the defenders of the State banks nullifies the effect of a provision which would permit the Federal Reserve Board to waive in whole or in part requirements relating to the admission of non-member banks.

On the whole, the changes which have been made in the Steagall bill since its introduction have been on the conservative side and have been accepted in response to justified criticisms. The new banking bill would not in any case appear to mark a dangerous departure from customary practices, if it were not for the American habit of relying upon legislation to prevent mistakes of judgment on the part of our banking managements. If the House bill should be enacted into law, therefore, its success or failure will depend in good part upon the character and intelligence of those Reserve officials who would be entrusted with enlarged powers of control over the credit system of the country.

Of course, if the Reserve Board were to become a mere agency for financing the needs of the Treasury, its new authority to force Federal Reserve banks to purchase Government securities under the open-market provisions of the bill might result in a disastrous form of credit inflation. But no central banking system is immune from the political pressure exerted by needy Treasuries. Political domination of the Reserve system would come rather from continuance of the policy of deficit financing than from mere increase of the powers of those in control of that system.

By Bus To Mecca.

A new kind of bus service, which only "the faithful" may enjoy and which does not start until the driver has said his prayers, has just been inaugurated between Bagdad and Mecca. Devout pilgrims are abandoning dromedary and donkey in favor of this service on tires. Kipling's nostalgic Tommy who plaintively regretted that "There ain't no buses running from the Bank to Mandalay," is nearly refuted by the latest conquest of gasoline.

Transcontinental bus systems are now a matter of routine here and in Europe. Their adoption in the Near East, and especially over the redoubtable Arabian Desert, seems somehow a little melancholy. Familiar postcard scenes of camel caravans outlined against the sunset will soon be a thing of the past. Loneliness and inaccessibility, ever the chief charm of the desert, suffer a death blow in this latest yielding to convenience. It would be hard to imagine anything more uninspiring than a bus silhouetted against a horizon of cloud formations.

The Arabian probably thinks this importation of New World methods is quite a feather in his tarboosh. For in one fell sweep, three hazards—time, discomfort and danger from bandits—have been eliminated. But the Arabs "don't know nothing yet." Wait until they are confronted with traffic problems, filling stations, hot dog stands, gasoline wars and the expense of highway upkeep. An uninhibited sheik will look like child's play beside these bugaboos of a machine age.

Still, there is always one consolation—if his bus is an hour late, at least the Arab won't have to wait for it in the rain! For rain in the Arabian Desert is scarcer even than available taxis on F street in a springtime downpour.

An Unusual Criticism.

Congressional committees are frequently accused of skimming over the surface of serious problems—of leaving the real sources of difficulty unexposed. The House committee which recently investigated crime in the District of Columbia has just experienced the novel accusation that it probed too deep. In the opinion of Representative Thomas L. Blanton, the committee exceeded its authority by making so thorough and searching an inquiry.

Mr. Blanton has done well to raise the point, although it is difficult to see why its elaboration needed to fill over 21 pages in the Congressional Record, at a cost to taxpayers not far short of the amount appropriated for the investigation itself. No committee should overstep its specific authority—not even in pursuit of a worthy cause. But before this challenge is allowed to detract from the sub-committee's constructive effort, close examination of the resolution by which the crime inquiry was authorized is in order.

The committee was directed:

(1) To investigate all forms of criminal activity in the District of Columbia, the probable causes for the commission of crimes, law enforcement and law-enforcement agencies, paroles and parole boards, the activities of the courts, the conduct of prisons; and

(2) To report to the House during the present Congress the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems advisable.

This wording carries definite instructions for the committee to investigate law-enforcement agencies and report its findings—whatever they might be—to Congress. In this specific mandate no reference is made to recommendations for changes in personnel, presumably because Congress does not exercise the appointive power. But it would be narrow construction indeed to read into this phraseology an injunction for the committee to have no opinion on personnel problems in the local agencies of law enforcement, which it had been directed to investigate.

It appears, therefore, that Mr. Blanton's charge can be sustained, if at all, only on somewhat captious grounds. Since Mr. Blanton is a vigilant friend of the District, it is rather strange that he should interpose a technicality in the way of a report designed only to promote this community's welfare. Moreover, Mr. Blanton is known to be deeply interested in the welfare of the local Police Department. He should not take exception in principle to proposals which, whether overzealous or not, are seriously advanced after extended study to enhance the efficiency of that organization.

Telling Minorities They Can't Vote.

From the Des Moines Register.

Iowa's Legislature, which certainly contains no greater percentage of "nervous Nellies" than does the State at large, has been offered a chance to vote on the bill which has cropped out in law-making assemblies all over the country this year—the denial of the ballot to Communists.

The bill is a wholly inconsistent proposal to come before a body which represents itself as obedient both to the Constitutions of the State of Iowa and of the United States, and to the demands of a majority of the voters.

For the Constitutions guarantee freedom of opinion, and they declare that the majority shall prevail as long as it remains a majority.

If Communists are a minority, whatever their views, they can not overthrow established government through the agency of the ballot, and their exclusion from it is an inanity.

If they are a majority, they will impose their will upon the rest of us whether we attempt to deny them their constitutional rights or no.

And Republicans and Democrats together may well ponder that conceivably the day may come when their own views will command something less than either first or second rank in popular indorsement. To legislate away the rights of smaller minorities during their own domination is therefore to establish a dangerous precedent, of which they may themselves some day fall victims.

Need For War Games.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several letters have appeared in The Post condemning the recent pageant at Chancellorsville, even reflecting on the intelligence of those who attended.

To many who saw, this was only a pageant, not greatly different from other military displays. To a person who believes, as did the great Theodore Roosevelt, in insuring peace by adequate protection, it was another step in the shaping of the "big stick" that guards our peace. It was a war game, such as will be played in New York State this summer, with vastly greater numbers and material. It provided experience to the national troops who took part. For the cadets of a school which has furnished soldiers to the service of the Nation during almost 100 years, it was their annual exercise in the field. That it was on a great battlefield did not detract from its value. Among these young men were cadets from nearly every State in the Union, and even from far-away China.

Those who oppose military preparedness can see no good in such exercises. But all history teaches that the nation losing the power to defend its borders is doomed. No one could stand on that field where thousands died without a horror of war. And to have peace we must not become so weak as to invite attack. "Trust God, and keep your powder dry." "UNCIVILIZED."

Washington, May 8.

Spinsters' Efficiency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The current controversy as to whether or not the wives of Government employes should be likewise employed has been debated on nearly every angle from the spreading of employment to morality. It appears, however, that what should be the crux of the matter has been almost totally ignored. I refer to the question of efficiency and capability.

The ultimate goal of 90 per cent of the normal females of the species is matrimony. Every mother hopes that some day her daughter will be introduced to the music of Mendelssohn. To attain this goal, each woman must overcome a certain amount of competition from other members of her sex. In order to be successful, therefore, she must possess attractiveness, part of which may be physical, but most of which must be intellectual. This being true, the result is that, as a general rule, the most intelligent women are to be found in the ranks of the espoused and not among the spinsters. It further follows then that in ignoring the married women the Government is installing a system of false economic reasoning which places job spreading above ultimate efficiency, which policy can only retard progress.

Curse Of Trained Economists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The excellent review of the Brookings NRA survey by Anna P. Youngman arouses conflicting emotions in those of us who have written and taught "economic principles," and also endeavored to secure codes adapted to given industrial problems.

Like all economists of the more conventional type, these gentlemen earnestly seek a logical group of well-knit generalities, which, in the guise of uniform "policies," could be comfortably applied to any and all economic situations. Alas!

No such easy path to intelligent administration of codes or of any economic legislation can fit that sprawling mass of variegated fish, fowl, animals and insects that makes up trades and industries. Who would be so blind as to think that an industry, whose manufacturing is a monopoly and whose distribution is a chaotic and uncountable number of diverse types of outlets, can be regulated by the same "policies" that should govern the reverse of that situation? Should the same "policy" apply to a trade or industry, which is changing in form overnight, that is adopted in the case of another activity which has not changed in 60 years?

To call for a "permanent Federal policy in labor legislation" is open to the same obvious comment.

The curse of all "trained" economists, with few exceptions, is that they mistake their own disinclination to travel the painful path of adequate factual study for something else; they call it the "scientific approach by uniform criteria."

A Business Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post quotes Francis E. Powell, head of the United States Chamber of Commerce, London, as being amazed at the stubborn fight being made by business here against the New Deal. Perhaps the following reasons, which are but a few of many, may enlighten Mr. Powell:

Repudiation of party platform and preelection promises.

Too many theorists and doctrinnaires in charge of Government.

Enactment of socialistic laws by demand of President, and issuance of codes that regiment and hamstring business and put it at mercy of labor unions. Utter disregard of Constitutional limitations.

Avowed purpose to destroy public utilities by Government competition and taxation, with callous indifference to the rights of millions who have their all invested in them.

Evidence of no intention to balance budget. Orgie of spending, engendering fear it will destroy credit of the Nation and mortgage the welfare of unborn generations.

Creation of conditions that will necessitate rate of taxation that will take all profit out of business, thereby destroying incentive to expand business and increase profits.

Propaganda of intimidation and coercion of business interests and even the courts.

With the right to live and do business menaced, property rights threatened, confidence destroyed by acts and attitude of the Administration, it would be not only amazing, but strange indeed, and give but little hope for the future if business did not fight the New Deal with all the resources at its command.

AMERICAN.

Real P. O. Game.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The postoffice ruling anent the dime chain, which does not interest me, turns my mind toward the Derby race pictures of some days ago, which showed the head of the Postoffice Department in company with one of the big race-course shots.

The best attorneys of the land say there is nothing illegal about chain letters, but as to race track gambling, consult the laws on the statute books of States and the Nation, and discover the well-known fact that it is the most widely spread and malignant of all games of chance; and one that contributes more to demoralization of human beings and filling the prisons than any other besetment of society.

If the Farley P. O. officials really want to go after real game, why do they not close down on all bridge games as illegal under any construction of gambling, and cut out of the mails and off the air all that promotes them?

MRS. M. V. MINSTER.

Washington, May 8.

Votes And Hoover.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: L. L. Pound, of Elkwood, Va., informs us in his letter of April 29 that Mr. Hoover would never have been guilty of the extravagance of the present Administration in spending so much money which has to be paid back with interest.

If, he tells us, Mr. Hoover had "dipped a steam shovel in the United States Treasury and taken out billions of dollars and squandered it," etc., he would still be in the White House. "But rather than place on the backs of the American people a burden that can not be paid, he left the White House."

Think of that, Hedda! He actually left the White House in spite of the pleadings of the American people who, with their votes, begged him to remain!

CLAUS BOGEL.

Indovinato.

New York City's recent relief squabble contributed a new word to the American language—boondoggling. As finally explained, to boon-doggle means to consume time by making gadgets. No sooner had that been cleared up than another metropolitan squabble produced another etymological mystery—indovinato. Mayor LaGuardia applied it to the much-controverted statue, "Civic Virtue." Writing to the sculptor, Frederick MacMonnies, he said that "every great artist is entitled to just a few sins," and that the work under debate "just is not indovinato."

This sent the reporters scurrying to reference works. Apparently they overlooked the secondary definition in the Italian dictionary, for they gave up and referred the problem to Mr. LaGuardia. The mayor finally explained all, expressing amazement that people didn't know what the word meant. He thinks it is of Italian origin, he said, though he has heard Germans, Slavs and Frenchmen use it. Its meaning: to hit the mark.

So is our language enriched. To put this new knowledge to good use immediately, we suggest that a statue turns out to be not indovinato when a sculptor goes boon-doggling.

The Post Impressionist

Post Offices, Saturday.

ONLY a little reached the cables concerning Germany's Easter: just a hint that the official celebration wasn't an Easter celebration at all. But now, by slow post, come details which show how—far from being a merely negative season little observed and soon ended—the new German Faith Movement's festival was a spring carouse due to end only with May and quite positively Neo-Pagan.

* * *

The accounts remind one of that fanciful and semihumorous essay in which Richard Le Gallienne, when a very young man, suggested a "Church of the Restoration:" a sect that would bring back the gods of ancient Greece, from Zeus and Pallas Athena to Eros and Aphrodite—but especially Aphrodite and Eros.

Only, humor was conspicuously absent—at least for the participants—from the German ritual. Everybody was every bit as serious as the thoroughly serious German Faith Movement thinks everybody ought to be. Everybody, in fact, was solemn, and so everybody—we still speak of the participants—had a perfectly wonderful time pretending that shirts were bearskins, that morning coats were coats of mail and that Easter hats were the helmets of Brunnehildes.

* * *

Indeed, our use of the past tense is, authoritatively, a mistake. As we have already indicated, this festival, being a spring festival, is not to cease until the first official month of summer. The faithful were commanded to keep on being deliriously joyful from midnight of the 31st of March until midnight of the 31st of May.

* * *

* * *

The word for the festivities is "dedication." Says a correspondent of the London Times:

"The spring Dedication ceremonies of the German Faith Movement are obviously designed to fill the important place in the child's life hitherto taken by Confirmation. They are called 'Jugendweihe' (dedication of youth) and are held for preference in the open air." In case of rain or snow, however, adjournment to the shelter of a roof is probably permitted upon presentation of doctors' certificates.

Anyway, at these rites the young children are vowed to the faith, and, as soon as that's over, the elder participants renew their own youth.

* * *

A typical Jugendthing—or Youth Rally—seems to have been that held a couple of weeks ago at Burg Hunxe, "one of those old castles which have been turned into hostels for youthful hikers."

Says the correspondent:

"On the Sunday morning the first Rheinish dedication took place here. The whole Thing formed into a procession, with the blue Viking flag and flaming torches in front."

Something or other had been rigged up to represent "The Grave of Honor for the Dead," and the paraders "grouped themselves around the tomb. Their leader spoke of the coming power of the German Faith, which was faith in the Reich under the flag of racial revolution and the Viking flag of the Revolution of the German Soul.

* * *

Shall we go on with the older folk?

The point is that there weren't any older folk—really. Really, there were only some folk that looked older. Really, cynics would say, the oldest-looking folk were the youngest-acting—largely because they might have been expected to know better.

* * *

The Song of the Goths!

We should have liked to see the Herr Burgomaster and Frau Burgomaster marching to that music. We should have liked to see the president and board of directors of the local bank in their Gothic costumes. We would be willing to pay a 60-cent dollar—as long as the 60-cent dollar remains at 60 cents—to peep at the bold students from the university drinking beer out of ox-horns and dancing in sandals. And we would pay almost any price to watch the modern damsels of the Rhineland ride up hill to the castle on big steeds with papier-mache wings. . . .

* * *

There has been a good deal of talk lately about what this country of our own—what this America of ours—needs. Perhaps it needs an American Faith Movement—with a hint from the German.

The ritual is all ready: you can lift it right out of "Hiawatha." The Indian Bureau would help. So would the Smithsonian Institution. And it wouldn't take much perusion to get the remaining American Indians to sell their feathers.

THE WHIPPING POST.

"Youth Admits He Murdered Texas Parents for Insurance."

We assume that the youth in question murdered his North Carolina parents for practice. But we can't quite figure out his motive for murdering his Massachusetts parents.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Big-Hearted Harry.

"YOU KNOW what tickles me the most?" asked Pete, the taxicab driver. "Well, the thing that tickles me most is that fellow Harry Hopkins. He's a caution, he is. He's always saying some of the funniest things you ever heard of.

"But the funniest thing is that I didn't think he was so funny at first. Naw sirree; that fellow had me fooled. I thought he was the biggest hearted man I had ever heard of. I used to say to myself, 'Now it's a pity all people can't be good-hearted and feel for their fellow man like Harry Hopkins. It would certainly be a wonderful place to live in I would say. I was always saying that to myself. That's how much respect I had for him; I would keep saying this to myself so many times.

"It was the little woman that got me tickled about him. I declare she's a good one. Smart, too. Well, sir, we've been married eight years now and I never have regretted for a minute marrying her. Didn't have to, either. I had my pick. Nearly all the girls was crazy about me.

"Aw, of course, we have our little spats, but nothing serious. Everybody has them and those that claim they don't I bet they have more than anybody else. Well, the little woman, she's always pointing out things to me, not that I'm dumb. But sometimes she points out things to me that make me think sometimes she is smarter than I am. And I encourage her to be smart. I'm not like those fellows who don't want their wife to be as smart as they is. Naw sir, I help mine to being just as smart as she wants to be. I tell her to listen to Mrs. Roosevelt on the radio.

"Anyways, I was having my breakfast this morning, the little woman always gets my breakfast and sits with me while I eat. Then suddenly I spies something in the paper and says 'Oh, oh, that's telling 'em.'

"'Whose telling who what?' she says, seeing an opening for conversation and my wife ain't like some women, she's easy to start a conversation with.

• • • •

"'Listen to this,' I says, and I reads her where Harry Hopkins says the Chamber of Commerce's a group 'whose thinking about national well-being begins and ends where their pocket-books are.' Then he says on:

"'I believe the days of letting people live in misery, etc., are over.'

"'That's what I call a man,' I says and I slaps down the paper. 'If everybody was as free with their money as that man, believe me I wouldn't be driving a taxicab.'

"Then the little woman, she says quiet-like, she says 'I wonder where he gets all his money from?'

"At first I was right provoked and I started to flare up as I do sometimes. Women can be so dumb sometimes, you know, not that my wife's any dumber than the rest, but you know, they just don't get around as much as we men do. Now you take me, I'm in this taxicab all day and I ride bankers, lawyers, politicians. I'm always hearing some smart people overtalk.

• • • •

"So I didn't flare up, I just said, 'Oh, it ain't his money he gives away.' And she said 'I thought so.' Well sir, then it occurred to me why she had asked where he got his money from in the first place and there I was too dumb to catch on. I got to laughing and first thing you know I was laughing outright. I mean I was really laughing.

"Even now when I think of that man I laugh. I've been tickled all day long.

"But he don't laugh do he? I've seen him in the movies lots of times and he's just as serious looking. Apparently he don't think the business about his being so good-hearted is funny at all. I keep thinking how the little woman looked at me when she said 'That's what he's paid to do.' You know she meant to be good-hearted. He's certainly got a lot of enthusiasm for his job, though, ain't he. I declare, he's funny, I reckon the reason he ain't got no pocketbook nerve is because he ain't got a pocketbook, eh?

"I Know Inflation"

Mississippi Mother With Fixed Income Recounts Experiences Of Raising Three Children In Days When Prices Are Outstripping Incomes.

By Mary Pitt McRae.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

WE believe that our dictionaries set meanings to the words which we use. This is not true. Our experiences set those meanings.

I am thinking, just now, of that word, inflation, which all of us are rolling about on our tongues, whether we have head any thing informative concerning it or have heard even one person with more than average intelligence discuss it.

To some of us that word, inflation, brings visions of a paradise, festooned and wreathed with greenbacks, which fall easily, into upturned palms, when moved ever so slightly by a wishful sigh. A grand dream that is.

To others, who have some real knowledge of money and its inherent dangers, the word means waste and loss and eventually calamity to a people. To my mind, it brings a troubled sense of the danger, which threatens the young mothers of this generation. I see them distressed beyond endurance because in the face of the high cost of living which inflation means they find it difficult and then more difficult to feed and clothe their children. These young mothers are facing what I faced in another time of inflation which was called "The Boom."

My husband died just as the World War was ended. He left me three young sons, little more than babies, and $20,000, invested to bring $100 a month. I was among the "bloated bondholders" as are many other women of far less means today. The income did not vary through all the years which I am discussing. That is the number of dollars received each month did not vary. The value, the buying power of those dollars, was a matter entirely different.

• • • •

AT first we lived very comfortably on our income. We had moved to a small Southern town in that section which Hergesheimer has designated, "the deep South." Never did we live so well as our neighbors, for they were without exception in business or on salaries and their incomes increased steadily with the boom.

I can not say with exactness when we began to feel the pinch of poverty decidedly. Its pressure increased so gradually and so insiduously through an almost imperceptible rise in prices that we were on the ragged edge before we realized that we would be forced to adopt another scale for our living. When we realized our situation our rent for the four-room cottage had risen from $10 to $25 a month. This, in spite of the fact that no house in the town had ever brought so high rent.

We had, by this time, given up the buying of any clothing except shoes and the garments which could not be fashioned from old clothes of a better day. And this was a time when people, only moderately prosperous, complained that they were forced to pay $25 for their shoes, since nothing cheaper would give a decent fit. It was the time when a conservative woman's magazine, in giving an estimate of the cost of a wardrobe for a business woman of very moderate salary, set the price of the coat at $80. Four of us had only $100 on which to live one month.

I HAVE listed a few of the prices which others paid for articles which we could not buy. Here are some of the prices of things which we had to buy. Coal, $15 a ton. Kerosene for stove and lamp, 30 cents a gallon. Flour, 12 cents a pound or four cups full. Bread, 16 cents a loaf. Our handling of the bread problem is a story of itself. A friend suggested that since we liked the bread made from our wholesome cornmeal, we eat it almost exclusively. Her reasoning was of a kind with that of Marie Antoinette's. For meal advanced steadily with all other foodstuffs and good corn bread required expensive eggs.

But returning to the list of prices, which will be clearly imprinted upon my brain when I die. Sugar, one pound, two cups, 30 cents. Rice the same. Coffee, not first quality, 60 cents. Lard, 40 cents; bacon, 60 cents; eggs, 60 cents; round steak from a nondescript, grass-fed cow, 40 cents. Good steak, $1. Oranges were 60 cents a dozen and more. The finest were, at one time, 90 cents. We did not buy oranges. I remember the 60-cent price because this price for good oranges existed when I was attacked with flu.

Three little boys were my nurses and I was my doctor. One day, they came into my room bearing with great ceremony, one of my most prized plates and on it an immense orange. They were excited and giggled with delight as I ate the orange. When I had finished, the secret was out. Each little boy had earned 5 cents by working for the neighbors and had paid it all for my orange. They had heard about the village that flu patients need oranges. It should be remembered that I was not a person who would be classed as destitute. I had, regularly, $100 a month. But those dollars did not buy anything.

• • • •

I WANT to say also, that I was not a person who knew nothing of the management of money and of the home. These things which were happening to us were things entirely without the limits of control. They were the evil imps of inflation. But on with that list. Cotton goods for homemade shirts was 50 cents a yard, and not the best at that. Really good qualities of cotton goods were priced as high as $1 and even higher than that. Shoes for small boys were never less than $5 and their half-soling was $1.50. Sleasy little cotton under suits were $1 and sweaters $5.

When all this showed us decidedly that we could no longer live in our comfortable little cottage, we moved to a dilapitated place at the edge of the town. Our rent was $10 a month for the place after I had paid for some repairs. For these, the brickmason charged $17 a day and the carpenter $10. The old Negro plowed our large garden patch charged $5 a day $2.50 for himself, $2.50 for his "jenny mule." And a midday dinner for himself.

Fortunately, we were a healthy crew and an optimistic one, closely related attributes. We decided to buy a cow and some chickens and two small pigs, on time, as our friends were buying automobiles, electric stoves, electric ice boxes, houses and bank buildings. The cow cost $100 and was worth perhaps $50. Each small pig, 8 weeks old and hardly strong enough to walk about the pen, was $5. The hens were $1.50 apiece. The rooster, like other average males of the animal kingdom, was much cheaper than the members of his harem. Man, alone, has more economic value than the female of his species.

THESE prices which came when the purchasing power of the dollar was reduced to 30 cents—according to Government figures—were lower than prices in larger centers, I think. As I have said, I, alone, seemed to feel any ill effect from this inflation. The white-collar people did not, it is true, have their incomes increased so greatly as did the industrial workers. But they were increased to keep pace with advancing prices. The demand for industrial labor was far greater than the demand for any other kind.

The basic cause of this situation lay in that unchangeable law of supply and demand. Two million of our best workers were taken by the Army. Added to the 2,000,000 jobs made vacant by their leaving, there were millions of other jobs created by the demand that the United States supply the naked, hungry world with food and clothing. I do not say that at first it was not an advantageous condition for the great majority of the people. There were few like me. The tragedy of the situation came from the fact that when the world demand slackened, dying gradually, and the workers returned to supplement the youth, grown to manhood since their leaving, then there was no realization that a change in the standards of financing and of living was necessary.

Those years immediately preceding the crash had nothing but inflated credit and hot air to keep them going. Everyone was head over heels in debt from the man who paid $500 down in buying a $50,000 house to the Negro field hand who wore a $3 "silk" shirt for which he had made a partial payment of 50 cents.

Rising prices are creeping upon us again. If you do not believe that, compare an itemized bill of your groceries for the present month with a bill for the same month last year. Wages are not keeping abreast of this rise in the cost of living. The rise in price levels is the result of artificial stimulation. A still further rise threatens our well-being. There is an attempt to stir wages to seek a like level but the raising of the price paid for labor is not the easy matter that the lowering the value of our money is. There must be a demand for an article or for a day's work if either is to have value. The two stimulators of that demand, which were present to start our disastrous boom, are not existent now.

I am very uneasy. Not for myself but for my children and their generation, the young mothers and the young fathers. Inflation. May they have stout hearts if they are called upon to meet it.

Patronage And Parties

By

Hon. J. C. O'Mahoney

Representative from Wyoming.

Following are excerpts from an address entitled "Can the Parties Live Without Patronage?" delivered before the National League of Women Voters on May 8:

THE question rather assumes as a major premise, that political parties really exist for the purpose of patronage. If I were to say nothing else tonight, I should want to say that the history of our country proves this to be an assumption without basis. Principles, not patronage, have always constituted the living force of our political system. Those parties which have been uncertain in their philosophy, even though they wielded the power of patronage without restraint, have never been able to preserve themselves from defeat when fundamental issues affecting the public welfare have had to be decided.

Of course, we all recognize that patronage has been abused in all periods of our history; that appointments to office have been made by all parties for no better reason than that the aspirants have rendered, or were believed to have rendered, effective partisan service, and that the hope of reward in the form of public office has frequently been the motive which has prompted ambitious men to aline themselves with one party or another. Indeed, many of those who have been candidates for election at the hands of the voters have not been above shaping their course on public questions by what they conceived to be the expedient thing to do. We may admit all of these things. We may acknowledge all of the unlovely phases of political life, and yet it may be said with absolute accuracy that the great majority of our citizens are guided by principle in their political affiliations.

• • • •

ONE of the perils of a republic is the growth of an officeholding class. It was to escape this danger that some of the earliest American colonists established the principal of rotation in office. Of course, that principle was abused and was made an excue by which executives in later years justified proscription of all political opponents. The fact that the principle was abused should not, however, close our eyes to its value, because it is one of the best possible means of keeping a government close to the people. In a republic we can afford to sacrifice a good deal of efficiency in order to be sure that we have a government which is responsive to the public will and which will serve the public interest.

It is for this reason that in all steps which we may take for the extension of the merit system in public life we must, above all things, be careful to preserve in the executive authority the right to appoint and remove at will all principal public officials who play a part in framing political policy.

• • • •

ONE of the three major reforms which it seems to me are ripe for adoption in the civil service system, is a practical plan for the transfer or reassignment of civil servants in the upper bracket to other duties in the same or in different departments without loss of rating. Under the present system if a department head desires to make a change among subordinate superintendents, it is ordinarily necessary to cause demotions of salary to an extent that does not seem to be justified in the absence of delinquency on the part of the official.

Another reform which would seem to be a natural development would be a prohibition against the covering into the civil service either by Executive order or by legislative enactment of either individual employes or classes of employes originally appointed without regard to the civil service laws.

A third reform, which I venture to hope is almost at hand, is the extension of the system to the appointment of all postmasters. These are officials who clearly have no functions to perform in the delineation of policy. Moreover, they are not concentrated at the seat of Government, but are scattered throught the Nation where they are constantly under the observation of the people whom they serve. When it becomes clear that postmasters are actually selected and appointed because of their capacity to perform the particular task to which they are assigned, public faith in the civil service system will be vastly increased.

Jamaica Natives Back Roosevelt

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh.—Jamaica natives are with President Roosevelt and his New Deal policies 100 per cent, Kenneth V. Abendana, former member of the Jamaica legislative council, said here.

"Down home we have tremendous confidence in Mr. Roosevelt," he explained. "The man is doing something. He is alive and his policies are taking your country some place. Of course, we are interested and cheered. Good times for America mean good times for Jamaica.

"The wealthy were too smug, too complacent," he said. "The driving policies of President Roosevelt are now teaching them how valuable it is to be liberal. They are learning to see the other fellow's side."

The lowering of duties on Jamaica sugar and bananas would be a welcome legislative development in his country, he said. "The duties are too high for us to compete with other countries, now. Consequently we ship our goods mostly to England and Canada."

Oil Waste Put At $62,000,000 In Dixie State

By the United Press.

Little Rock, Ark.—Careless and ruthless oil men have wasted $62,877,000 worth of Arkansas oil and gas supply, Dr. George C. Branner, State geologist, has computed.

The orgy of waste began when the Dusey discovery well was drilled-in west of El Dorado in 1921. Operators went wild with the boom-town mania and worked feverishly with but one objective—to get oil out of the ground as fast as possible and on the way to market.

Natural Gas Wasted.

No one cared how many thousand cubic feet of natural gas it took to raise a barrel of oil through the casing to the surface. That disregard appeared with wanton sameness throughout the ten production areas discovered around El Dorado up to 1928.

Then came the day of reckoning. No new sands could be discovered, natural flow stopped in the wells and the fields "went on the beam." Each stroke of the pumping beams has punctuated a rebuke of wasteful operation.

Oil men have learned their lesson now, but perhaps too late. Natural gasoline plants—"cracking" plants—are piping gas from Louisiana to supplement the deficient Arkansas supply. The operators have learned economy, too. After they extract the gasoline from the gas they return the gas to the producers to use as fuel.

Huge Losses Incurred.

"It is difficult, if not impossible, to calculate with any degree of accuracy the losses incurred by the wasteful operation," Dr. Branner said, "but they may be classified as follows:

"(1) Loss of the gas itself; (2) the loss of the gasoline vapor carried by the gas, and (3) the material reduction in the quantity of oil recoverable from the oil sands by present production methods due to the reduction of gas pressure in these sands."

The latter is the greatest loss. South Arkansas produced 407,881,000 barrels of oil during the period 1921-1934, inclusive, Dr. Branner computed. Ultimate economic production under present methods is 480,000,000 barrels. If the gas had been conserved, he said, the recovery might have been increased 10 per cent, or about 48,000,000 barrels with an estimated value of $43,900,000.

Branner's Records.

Dr. Branner's records indicate 227,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas taken from southern Arkansas fields during the same period. He believes a fourth of it was wasted during the flush production days. Assuming the wasted gas had an average content of 2.5 gallons of gasoline per 1,000 cubic feet and the gasoline were worth 8 cents a gallon a mere $11,350,000 was blown into the air. Add to that the value of 45,400,000,000 cubic feet of commercial fuel gas after the gasoline was extracted and the loss is increased another $7,627,000.

That's where $62,877,000 worth of gas and oil went.

Ouster Measure Is Up in France

Undesirable Foreigners Are Found Costly.

By the United Press.

Paris.—Members of the Chamber of Deputies, headed by Xavier Vallat, are dealing with the problem of the undesirable foreigner in France on financial grounds.

It has been found by experience that an expulsion decree seldom takes effect, as a foreigner can change his address and by keeping quiet escape the authorities for months and even years. The police can not adopt the simple remedy of paying a foreigner's way out of the country because no funds are provided for that purpose.

The case of an Italian has been cited—a man who has repeatedly been sent to prison for disobeying his expulsion decree. In all, he has served nine years and eight months in jail and has cost the country $1,638 instead of $3.78, the price of a railroad ticket to the frontier.

In hopes of remedying the situation, Vallat has drafted a bill to be presented to the chamber. If this is passed, undesirable foreigners who ignore decrees of expulsion will be escorted speedily out of France.

Immortals May Get Skyscraper

French Academy Thinking of Building One.

By the United Press.

Paris.—That venerable institution, the French Academy, is thinking of installing itself in a skyscraper.

The bulbous-domed Palais Mazarin on the banks of the Seine, in which five of the numerous academies which compose the French Institute have their quarters, is proving inadequate for its task and a committee of the Forty Immortals has been appointed to decide how to improve its usefulness and how to protect it from fire.

The committee's first move was typically academic. It decided to repair an unused stairway so that members of the French Academy will not have to use the same entrance to the building as ordinary academicians, who remain mortal.

The more radical project of constructing a skyscraper in the court facing the Mint, in order to house all the branches of the institute, was received with less favor. Its proposer pointed out that the Mint is considering moving, and that its building might then be added to the skyscraper.

Perhaps the problem of financing the new building had something to do with the disfavor with which the proposal was greeted. The academy is not overburdened with available funds.

Infantile Paralysis

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

IT IS NT only news in the world of books, but good news to many anxious parents and others that an attractive little volume has just appeared, written in a simple, popular, clear, non-technical style by a famous specialist. This book, of 167 pages, is called "Infantile Paralysis," and is written by Dr. George Draper, of the faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. The book is dedicated to Mrs. James C. Greenway, who has done so much for the support of the Constitution Clinic at the Presbyterian Hospital and who "has furthered the postulate especially emphasized in this book: that the study of man is essential to a proper understanding of disease."

• • • •

Now, many books by medical men are in the nature of warnings; something will get you if you don't watch out!

One of the objects of Dr. Draper's book is to allay fear; to calm the nerves of those who are afraid. In short, to give them not only courage but hope. He says in the preface that he thinks the material presented "will help the layman to view the disease as a whole. Perhaps when this picture fills his mind it may seem that infantile paralysis is, after all, not so terrifying as he once believed; that it is much less serious than many ailments with which he is more familiar."

• • • •

And he proceeds to tell us all about it, with plenty of illustrations out of his own experience in treating this disease.

Dr. Draper was born in New York, took his B. A. at Harvard, his M. D. at Columbia and studied abroad.

Ford to Move FamedBuilding Off Plantation

Ante-Bellum Hermitage Is to Rise on Ogeechee River Site.

By the United Press.

Savannah, Ga.—The Hermitage, famous ante-bellum plantation near here, will live again on a new location, but exactly the same as when it flourished before the Civil War.

Henry Ford and his wife have purchased the old buildings, long since fallen into decay, and will have the brick and timber moved to the 70,000-acre Ford estate on the Ogeechee River, 18 miles south of Savannah.

There with the aid of old pictures and plans of the house in possession of old families of Savannah, the Hermitage will be reconstructed, the manor house slave quarters and other buildings in the same relative position as to location and distance apart, as they have stood since the early years of the nineteenth century.

On Ogeechee Bluff.

Standing on a bluff overlooking the Ogeechee River, it will present the identical appearance it did when Henry McAlpin, Scotch immigrant, built it a little after 1814.

Oddly enough, on the new site there is an avenue of oaks that closely resemble the one on the old site, which will lend to the natural appearance of the whole.

The buildings that still are standing will be torn down and rebuilt on the new location, using the same brick. Those that have fallen away will be reconstructed from the pictures and plans. All construction will be done with brick manufactured on the plantation, and timber growing there.

A clay deposit on the plantation will furnish the brick, which are famous for their durability and size.

Ideal Example.

The Hermitage is recognized as an ideal example of the "before the war" plantation, and many early movies were made there.

Henry McAlpin came to Georgia from Scotland, and in 1814 bought the land on which Hermitage Manor now stands. He was an architect and planned and designed the whole plantation himself.

Using the natural resources at hand, timber cut from his land, and brick molded by the tramping feet of slaves, the Scotchman erected the beautiful old place.

The mansion is in a very good state of preservation, though it was ransacked during Sherman's occupation of Savannah, mantels and furnishings being completely destroyed by the soldiers.

Safe on 'Cycle, Slips on Walk.

Dover, Ohio (U.P.).—Motorcycle Officer Ralph Lewis can't figure it out. For months he had been riding a police motorcycle on wet, slippery and even rough roads without a spill. Then one evening as he walked home from a theater with his son, he slipped on the sidewalk, fell and broke his left leg.

Chinese Kentucky Colonel.

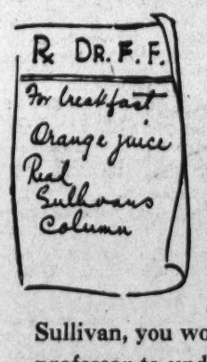
Cincinnati (U.P.).—Charley Yee, an inn proprietor, is believed to be the only Chinese Kentucky colonel in the world. Lawrence Gammon, State representative from Kentucky, presented Yee his commission, signed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon.

Henry Jones, who was sad and downcast for many years, is a happy man now. "It's this way," explains Hank. "It uster be when I got home I hadda eat outa cans or buy a hamburger down at Joe's hash-house. You see, the missus loved gossip and she spent her afternoons hangin' over the back fence tradin' scandal with the neighbors 'stead of gettin' supper.

"But I fixed that. I subscribed to The Washington Post and now she gets enough gossip outa that feller Ed Sullivan's Broadway column to last her all day. She says he sure knows how to tell things, all right."

But Ed Sullivan is not just a gossip-teller, a keyhole listener-inner, a Peeping Tom with a typewriter. Ed chronicles the doings of that biggest of all hick towns, New York. With Broadway and Forty-second street as his base of operations, Sullivan stops (briefly), looks (intently), and listens (long). The result is a column of news and gossip ... those little whispers which later roar at you from the front page headlines.

Another nice thing about Ed Sullivan's Broadway column is that it is written for the reader ... and not just to high-hat some other columnist. We know a college professor who once spent months translating what he termed "Broadwayese." For instance, he learned that "The Umphs who middle-aisled it Choosday yawning, phhht! yesdy. He's carrying the torch for a certain revusical eye-full now" really means that Mr. and Mrs. Umph, who were married last Tuesday, have parted, and that Mr. Umph is now in love with a chorus girl. But when you read Sullivan, you won't have to be a college professor to understand what he means ... for Sullivan's lines have sparkle, snap and wit ... and he doesn't depend upon a tortured pun to pack a wallop.



"Broadway," as seen through Ed Sullivan's slightly cynical but ever-interesting eyes, is as breezy as a cocktail party, as smart as a Noel Coward comedy, as entertaining as a ringside table. Not to read Ed Sullivan's column right after downing your orange juice each morning is to miss a lot of fun. Sullivan doesn't tell the news behind the headlines ... he tells the news ahead of the headlines ... and tells it five mornings each week in

What Religion Means to Me

By Edwin N. Lewis,

Secretary of the National Cathedral Association and Editor of the Cathedral Age.

If friends right here in Washington were to ask me how this whole subject of religion might be summed up in a few words, I would ask them to make a pilgrimage to the Chapel of St. Mary in the Cathedral. The simple inscription above the altar reads:

"The Way—the Truth—the Life."

These revealing words were spoken by Christ to St. Thomas as recorded in the fourteenth chapter of St. John's Gospel.

In the first century of the era that began with His birth in Bethlehem, Christians were often called "Children of the Way." They had found, at whatever cost, a pathway to peace and salvation, in the midst of a pagan world. We read in the New Testament of their burning hearts, their amazing zeal and their steadfast fellowship. They found strength in companionship along the road to victorious living.

Spiritual trail-blazers, they left in the Book of Acts, St. Paul's letters and other sacred writings, the charts and maps by which millions of men and women have found "The Way." Yet we are told that in our country less than one-half of the people are affiliated with any branch of the Christian Church.

Once having found "The Way," we begin to advance toward a new conception of "The Truth." Next to bewilderment, the dominant note in many lives today is that personal depression caused by lack of faith.

Real and vital religion gives the answer. Men and women whose thoughts are fastened on spiritual truth are impervious to the corroding action of human deceit. "The things above" offer not only an antidote, but a complete cure for "the things below."

The Christian life, as I have come to experience it, is a creative achievement, varying with individual gifts, but always dependable when conditions of surrender and discipleship are met.

These convictions, expressed by just one layman, are the result of my association with the Cathedral Foundation for ten years and with the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and, more recently, have been confirmed and given new meaning in the First Century Christian Fellowship of Oxford Group.

Horse Show Again Plays In Bad Luck

The Djalals and Princess Ourusoff Are Among Those Attending.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The National Capital Horse Show has played in bad luck with the weather so far. After an opening day of intermittent sunshine and threatening skies, a timid crowd turned out to see the last classes of the day, and yesterday, when the skies glowered most of the day, spectators were still afraid to make the trip to Bradley Farms.

However, the "horsey" crowd was there, not worrying about the heavy shower of the late afternoon, and a goodly gathering of those interested in the social aspect of the show, looking a little bedraggled and chilly as they huddled under umbrellas.

The Junior Leaguers, in their apple green smocks, with the white "J. L." embroidered on the pockets, worked hard at the luncheon hour, and through their efforts drew a large group throughout the afternoon to the clubhouse for tea and refreshments, and even held "petit salons" in the gift house and at the hot dog stands. These tiny white buildings, with their gay green shutters, and window boxes filled with pink geraniums, are the most attractive additions to the horse show grounds. It is amazing how many bottles of drinks and hot dogs a man will consume if he is approached by a good salesman!

Sun Follows Showers.

The rain, however, did little to mar the charming effect of the rolling hills of Maryland where the show ring is situated. For soon after the heavy showers the sun came out, and all those who had not attended the show were sorry, and those who had braved gray skies removed their topcoats and enjoyed the remainder of the day.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Associate Justice Roberts, and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, are among the most ardent horse show goers in Washington and each year reserve a box for the three days of the show.

Nearby were the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, in a box with a group of guests, and still farther down the line was Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock with Miss Dorothy Sollers. Also occupying a box were Mrs. Price Whitaker and Miss Alice Wilkins. Miss Wilkins has been making her home on Twenty-fourth street for the last year, and has recently been joined by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Blakiston Wilkins, who have come from their home in France and have purchased a house on R street, planning to make their home here in the future.

Princess Ourusoff Attends.

Princess Ourusoff, the former Miss Kate Carlisle, was with Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat and the latter's two girls, who wore pink tweed coats with hats to match. Miss Carlina Sheridan and Miss Gertrude Laughlin, daughter of the former Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Irwin B. Laughlin, were together as usual, both wearing smart frocks of navy blue, the former with a smart hat trimmed with bright red cherries.

Others glimpsed were Mrs. Alex B. Legare, Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin. Mrs. Harold Walker was there, having lunched hurriedly at the Mayflower before going to Bradley Farms. She wore a navy blue and white printed suit with a large blue hat, and was accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Aldace Walker, of New York, who arrived yesterday to spend the week-end with her father, Mr. Joseph E. Davies. Mrs. Davies sailed last week to spend several months in Europe.

Miss Betty Couzens and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr., were joined by Miss Margaret Cotter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotter, who had ridden successfully in several classes earlier in the day. Miss Margaret Hill, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hill, who had won several ribbons in classes early in the day, also joined them.

Hairdresser Installs A Miniature Movie

Boston (U.P.).—Women who fret as they sit for two or three hours for a "permanent" need consider this an ordeal no longer.

An enterprising Boston hairdresser has rigged his beauty parlor so that women in the process of being waved may kill time by watching the antics of Mickey Mouse or educational and travel films.

His miniature "theater" has a capacity of 40 "heads," and the movie show is continuous from 11 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Pilson-Castle Bridal Revealed

Wedding at Catonsville, Md., Announced by Parents of Bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice C. Pilson announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor Taylor Pilson, to Mr. J. Bayne Castle, son of Mrs. G. W. Castle and the late Mr. Castle, on March 24, in Catonsville, Md.

Mr. Castle and his bride are spending the week-end in Baltimore, Md., and will attend the Preakness today and a dinner later. Upon their return they will make their home at Oxon Hill with Mr. Castle's mother and his uncle, Dr. Breckenridge Bayne.

Daniel Lord Wed To Donna Torlonia

Word has been received of the marriage of Donna Christiana Torlonia, daughter of Countess Elsie Moore Torlonia, of New York, and the late Count Marino Torlonia, of Italy, to Mr. Daniel Lord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin B. Lord, of New York.

Donna Torlonia and Mr. Lord were married yesterday morning at 2 o'clock at the Town Hall of Harrison, N. Y., by Justice of the Peace Leo Mintzer, of Silver Lake. Following the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom notified their parents by telephone and immediately went to New York.

The bride's brother, Don Alessandro Torlonia, was married several months ago to the Infanta Beatrice, daughter of the former King of Spain.

Church Group Sponsors Tour Of Old Homes

Rector's Aid of St. Paul's Conducts Exhibit in Alexandria Today.

Members of the Rector's Aid of St. Paul's Church in Alexandria will sponsor a tour of the interesting and historic old homes in that city today. The houses will be open to the public in the morning between the hours of 10 and 1 o'clock and during the afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.

The beautiful old house at 415 Wolfe street, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Poynter, has been added to the tour, replacing the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Howland on South Lee street. The house was built in 1753 by a Mr. Fitzpatrick, a ship builder and has rare old paneling, beautiful mantels and unusual cupboards. It is surrounded by gardens.

Among the 19 houses to be exhibited is the home of Col. and Mrs. D. H. Torrey, 429 North Washington street, which was built about a century and a half ago and was originally the home of Richard Philip Fendall, a celebrated attorney of his day. The night Gen. Washington died, a group of distinguished citizens met there to arrange for Alexandria's part in the final tribute to him.

Keyes Home on Tour.

Another house is that of Senator and Mrs. Henry Keyes, at 111 North Alfred street. Besides its colorful past, this house is making history today as the home of the senior Senator from New Hampshire and Frances Parkinson Keyes. As a result of Mrs. Keyes' extensive travels, the house is filled with objects of interest from all parts of the world.

Col. and Mrs. Harry Cootes have added comfort to the original charm of the historic house at 1021 Prince street. Time-mellowed bricks and old walled gardens have been preserved, lending an air of permanence to one of the most successful restorations in Alexandria.

Visitors may see St. Paul's Church on South Pitt street, which was erected in 1817 and in which Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis (Nellie Custis) and Judge and Mrs. Bushrod Washington worshipped.

Boothe Home Is Ancient.

Another interesting building on South Pitt street is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Boothe, descendants of the Leadbeater family, who have owned and lived in it for the past four generations. It was already an old house when it was purchased in 1847.

Other houses which are on exhibit tomorrow: 711 Princess street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Lloyd Boothe, an example of Georgian architecture, built in 1799; 913 Cameron street, a picturesque dwelling which has been occupied by the same family for five generations and which is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Douglas, sr.; 819 Prince street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, which is filled with priceless heirlooms and family portraits; 211 South Washington street, the home of Mrs. Hubert Snowden, who cherishes the quaint garden and antique furniture; 601 Duke street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris L. Horner, and which was built in 1700 by Benjamin Dulany; 317 South St. Asaph street, one of the best examples of the "flounder" type of architecture peculiar to a few pre-Revolutionary towns in America, the home of Mrs. F. M. Dillard; 506 Prince street, remarkable for fine woodwork and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin George; 212 South Fairfax street, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Thorpe; 210 Prince street, one of the famous colonial "town houses," the home of Miss Pauline Lambert; 106 South Lee street, constructed with great oak beams, famous for the tobacco closet in the chimney, and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Hill; 109 Prince street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Weller, which was built on one of the streets cobbled by Hessian soldiers; Potomac Courts, in which are the homes of Mr. and Mrs. William Byrd, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Miller and Mr. and Mrs. William Carter, and 404 Duke street, originally the home of Richard Bland Lee and now the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett.

Spring Evening Wraps Have Striking Linings

Paris (AP).—Linings are something to look at and talk about this spring. They are out in contrasting colors and unusual materials. One designer lines a silver lame cape with light green lapin. Another finishes the inside of a turquoise satin wrap with turquoise ostrich feathers. A black taffeta evening coat is lined in bright red and a three-tiered, white, shaved lamb cape lined in black.

Blouses Turn Elegant.

Paris, May 10 (AP).—Blouses are "dressier" this year than they have been for some time. Satin, organdy and lace are all used to make them. One of the smartest new suits of gun-metal gray wool has a blouse of soft gold satin.

Alumnae Group Will Hear Talk By Dr. Enlows

Sigma Kappa Luncheon to Honor Mrs. Brenner, Grand Secretary.

DR. ELLA M. A. ENLOWS, local surgeon, will speak to a large group of alumnae members of the Sigma Kappa Sorority today at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, after the luncheon given in honor of Mrs. James Brenner, of Palo Alto, Calif., grand secretary of the sorority. "The Progress of Women in the Medical Profession" will be the subject of Dr. Enlows' talk.

Before engaging in the practice of medicine, Dr. Enlows was widely known for research in bacteriology, having served in that capacity for a number of years in the United States Public Health Service after her graduation from George Washington University. Her achievements in bacteriology and surgery have received recognition in England as well as in the United States.

Dr. Enlows always has been a champion of the thought that women could accomplish big things if they would shut their eyes to obstacles and look only toward the ultimate goal.

Representatives from local alumnae organizations of each of the 23 national college sororities will attend. Others attending will be Mrs. Homer T. Bone, Mrs. William C. Van Vleck and Mrs. James Shera Montgomery. Miss Helen C. Jones, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, will preside. Mrs. Maris M. Proffitt will be in charge of the arrangements.

Mount Vernon Group Convenes.

Vice regents attending the spring sessions of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association at the historic estate on the Potomac River include Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Virginia; Miss Helen L. Sargent, of the District of Columbia; Miss Mary F. Failling, of Oregon; Mrs. Horace M. Tomer, of Iowa; Mrs. Thomas Denham, of Florida; Mrs. Lucien M. Houke, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Anna Burr Jennings, of Missouri; Mrs. George A. Carpenter, of Illinois; Miss Mary Govan Billups, of Mississippi; Mrs. Horton Pope, of Colorado; Mrs. Jefferson Randolph Anderson, of Georgia; Mrs. Horace Vandenter, of Tennessee; Mrs. Henry Gold Danforth, of New York.

Mrs. Alexander C. Troup, of Nebraska; Miss Virginia Leigh Percher, of South Carolina; Miss C. Lee Pittertin, of West Virginia; Mrs. George Woodbury, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Harold Lee Berry, of Maine; Mrs. Horace Brown, of Vermont; Mrs. Earl K. Lloyd, of Kansas, and Mrs. J. Fairfax Loughborough, of Arkansas.

Trinity Club to Entertain.

The Washington Club of Trinity College will entertain the graduating classes of the Catholic high schools of the city at a tea at the college from 3 to 5 o'clock today.

The guests will be received by the officers of the club: Miss Elizabeth Doody, president; Miss Geraldine Parent, vice president; Miss Rita Walsh, secretary; Miss Mary Reges, treasurer; Miss Dolores Carroll, publicity agent, and Miss Clara Chaconas, parliamentarian.

Tea will be served in the social hall of the college, with Mrs. James F. Hartnett, Mrs. Charles A. McMahon and Mrs. Walter S. Steele assisting.

Mrs. Reed to Sing in Broadcast.

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will present Mrs. William T. Reed, contralto, in a Mother's Day program at 12:30 o'clock from Station WRC.

Mrs. Reed is a prominent church soloist and head of the vocal department of the Martha Washington Seminary. She will be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham. Mrs. Everett Burroughs Hickerson, of the federation's radio committee, will introduce the artists.

Plays to Be Presented.

The Young People's Society of St. Margaret's Church will present two one-act plays and a solo dance at 8:15 o'clock tonight in the parish hall of the church. The plays will be directed by Mrs. R. H. Pratt.

The cast of "Minerva Sets the Stage" is composed of Kearsley Caldwell, Lucy Pfahler, Margaret Thornton, Helen Miller and Lewis Gibbs. The parts in "Mistletoe and Moonlight" will be played by Agnes Fitzhugh Shapter, Marjorie Burton, Jane MacLeod, Francis Shinn, Wayne Buchanan, Sandford Tilton, John Snyder and Walton Grubbs. Jacqueline Jones will present the specialty dance.

Byrd Expedition 'Widows' Disclose Their Reactions

By Frances Mangum.

THE ERA of weeping, wailing, wives who bid their husbands tearful farewells and pine during long months while the men are away, is gone, to judge by those who were waiting yesterday at the Willard Hotel to greet the homecoming Byrd party.

Almost two years these wives have waited while their husbands braved the frozen wastes of Little America. Hundreds of women have wondered if the years were filled with fear and foreboding for them? If nerves jangled each time the phone rang or a radiogram arrived?

But let the wives speak for themselves: Mrs. Robert English, whose husband is captain of the Bear, confessed she was so excited over the homecoming she could hardly talk.

Concentrated on Work.

"But I haven't worried," Mrs. English said. "I wouldn't let myself. I went to work and concentrated on my job. Of course I was upset when I learned that Robert was ill, but I didn't worry about the expedition part at all. I had complete confidence, you see.

"Lonely? Oh, yes, I was lonely, but of course there was my job. But even that couldn't hurry the months!"

Mrs. Finn Ronne, whose husband was the ski expert of the expedition, had also found recourse from lineliness in working.

"My sister and I bought a restaurant," she said. "I've been so busy managing it that I haven't had time to worry. I wouldn't anyway. I knew, just knew, that everything would be all right."

Cabled Husband About Venture.

Mrs. Ronne said she sent a radiogram to her husband telling him about her business venture and received an immediate answer saying he would look forward to a free meal ticket. But whether she will continue working—"That I don't know; I'll have to talk to my husband first!"

To this industrious young wife the time has gone fast. "It does," she explained "if you keep yourself absorbed in things. And then, too, I wanted my husband to have the opportunity of going. He certainly would have felt the same way about me."

Mrs. Clare McCormick, mother of the young autogiro pilot, Bill McCormick, expressed herself as "effervescing with joy" at her son's return.

"I met him a short time ago in Los Angeles," she said. "Admiral Byrd had given him permission to leave the expedition on this last lap. I drove 3,000 miles in ten days to meet him! And I would have driven twice that if I had had to!

Promised Son an Auto.

"You see, I had promised Bill any kind of a car he wanted when he returned and I told him I'd meet him in it. It took fast working, but I kept my promise."

Mrs. McCormick said she sent her son catalogues and told him to spend Christmas day selecting the model. When he made up his mind, she'd attend to the rest—and she did!

"The whole time he was gone," she said, "I just kept thinking about what a fine thing the expedition was for him. You see, he was only 20 when he left. New he's 22—and I can hardly believe it. I'd keep thinking, too, how lucky he was to have the chance to go. When you keep your mind on things like this why you can't be blue.

"Besides, I talked to him five times over the radio. That helped, you can bet. And I kept him fairly snowed under with radiograms.

"There's so little we can do when our boys go away that even these small things seem big. I guess they do mean a lot—at least Billie said they did."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am 25 years old, the mother of a healthy 2-year-old child, am separated from my husband, employed and live with my parents. My mother takes care of Sonny while I work. I am not worried about the loss of my husband nor the responsibility of rearing my child. What is bothering me is something very deep-rooted within me, and something I wish to have explained by a good psychiatrist. Could you recommend one through your column?

* * * *

It started when I was 13. I brooded for weeks and told my mother I wanted to be dead. At 17, I had another spell and managed to go on a vacation far away. Hard as I tried, I could not enjoy the trip or get my mind off myself and that feeling of mental insecurity. Again at 20 I had been secretly worrying for a year, despite dancing, parties and social contacts I made to try to get away from myself. I almost had a nervous breakdown. However, I was keeping company with my husband and we got married. * * * *

I didn't want to get married, didn't love him, but was in such a desperate mental state I was willing to do anything. My parents rather urged me on, thinking I was lovesick. I was more miserable than ever that first year of marriage. It was so hard to pretend. However, I did manage to work out of my mental state and did everything to make a pleasant home for my husband. When the baby was born I was very happy. Then my husband started running around and getting into scrapes and finally asked to be free, so we separated last fall.

* * * *

Then two months ago, without any reason, I began again to feel despondent. No matter where I am or what I am doing I feel that something is worrying me. The awareness of this obscure worry makes me feel insecure. It must stop or I don't know where I will end. I want to be free and pray God to help me. But why am I unable to help myself? Perhaps the psychiatrist can help me. I hope so.

UNHAPPY MOTHER.

* * * *

DEAR UNHAPPY MOTHER: I'm sure a psychiatrist can help you if you will cooperate with him patiently, intelligently and trustingly in discovering the root of the tremendous inner conflict which has brought on these recurrent attacks of nervous illness.

* * * *

Since I am not free to recommend a given psychiatrist through this column, I am suggesting instead that you telephone ADams 7979 and make an appointment with Miss Beulah Smith, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene.

Miss Smith will take your case uner smydpathetic and attentive advisement, and either recommend you to a private practitioner or make clinical treatment available. Miss Smith is in her office from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. from Monday to Friday, and from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. on Saturdays. I have talked with her regarding your case, and she is expecting to hear from you. M.H.

Indian Background in Musical Growth Of U. S. Seen by Mrs. Roberta Lawson

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Oklahoma, is shown above presenting one of her Indian relics to Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, left, and Prof. John R. Swanton, of the Bureau of American Ethnology. The relic is a color plate of the Indian tobacco pouch used at the peace conference between William Penn and the Delaware Indians.

"SOME DAY in the American school of music we will find the ladder of musical growth, and Indian music will be the foundation rung."

This is the prediction of Mrs. Roberto Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., America's foremost woman student of Indian art and culture. Mrs. Lawson, who is a direct descendent of Charles Journeycake, last tribal chief of the Delaware Indians, has spent years in an exhaustive study of ancient Indian life and custom, with special emphasis on the red man's music.

She is in Washington over the week-end to confer with officials of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, of which she is first vice president. She is a candidate for the presidency of the federation, which meets in Detroit in June to elect new officers.

In her suite at federation headquarters, Mrs. Lawson told a group of interested listeners about Indian music customs.

"Ceremony and music had much to do with Indian life," she explained. "No event was complete without song and dramatization. There was specific music for every occasion—for dancing, for solemnity, for religion. The Indian well knew the effect of music and rhythm on human emotions, and he took advantage of it, especially in ceremonial music."

Love songs?

"Oh, yes!" Mrs. Lawson smiled. "The old saying, 'all the world loves a lover' held true before the white man came to America. As a matter of fact, the most popular of all American Indian music is the love song.

"The flute is the favorite instrument for love melodies; in fact, the flute was the most used of any Indian musical instrument. Different tribes had flutes with different scales, so each would have a distinctive type of music. Flutes were almost always used in courtship ceremonies, which also varied with each tribe."

The wooing song of the Indian brave is often preserved by the family and becomes a lullaby for the first-born. Of course the old picturesque customs and real native-born music is dying, yet so long as young love lasts, the Indian love song will remain."

The earliest recording of any Indian melodies was by Marquette, about 1675, according to Mrs. Lawson. In making America, Indian art and customs were almost completely overlooked as an American asset. It remained for a foreign country to find and label Indian music as American folk songs. In 1906, representatives of the German government, in their research work in American music, visited some American Indian reservations and obtained 188 records of songs, which are now preserved at Berlin.

Mrs. Lawson is planning to enlarge her book on "Indian Music Programs," in which she has outlined the origin and history of Indian music and has translated scores of old Indian songs.

In addition to her interest in Indian music, Mrs. Lawson has accumulated the world's largest private collection of Indian relics and curios.

Nerve Strain Often Makes Child Listless

Parents Advised Against Driving Chronically Tired Youngster.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

"FREDDIE seems to be tired all the time." Some such remark is heard frequently by physicians who are called upon to examine large numbers of children. The complaint is not uncommon with youngsters between the ages of 4 and 14 years.

Most physicians recall little patients who fall into this category. The child may merely look tired but more often there has been a change from a bright, active boy or girl to one who is listless, who wants to "just sit," or who is even eager for bed.

We have all seen normally tired children. Ordinary fatigue follows indulgence in heavy play or other forms of exercise. This is not the type referred to. It is the child who is constitutionally tired and who perhaps but once or twice during the day will show any degree of alertness.

School Taxes Nervous Child.

One often wonders if parents and school teachers realize the load carried by the nervous, anxious child while in school. A fair percentage, under the strain of school activities, of lessons that must be done, will begin to lose weight, become pale and grow less and less able to perform their daily tasks. It is not that the mental exercises are beyond the capacity of the child, but it is the steady, insistent "must" that wears down nervous and physical forces.

School pressure can better be withstood later in life, perhaps during the high school or college period, and it is a wise parent indeed who recognizes wearing out factors and so regulates the child's progress that, although he may be a year older than the average for his grade, he is strong and well.

Digestive Disorder May Be Cause.

Of course, certain organic conditions must be considered. One of the most frequent causes of exhaustion lies in a disordered digestion. With this may be included constipation. The hemoglobin or the red cells may be low, or there may be an occasional afternoon temperature. Although tuberculosis should be thought of, this is rarely the cause. Because of the lack of body resistance there may be infection of the nasal passages or of the throat that will account for sufficient absorption to bring on a temperature. All of this vanishes as soon as the resistance of the body has been raised by added rest.

The remedy lies in more careful attention to rest, to a lightening of home and school tasks, to more food or better food. The child who eats daintily, who does not possess a voracious appetite, may be perfectly normal, but he may have a digestive tract that will not easily care for normal quantities of food. He is inclined to visit the cooky jar or the jam pot. This means that he should have four or five meals a day of modest amounts, rather than the standard three meals normal in size. Appetite is a wise guide. But few children will require a tonic designed to whip-up appetite.

Helen Keller Here to Seek Aid for Blind

Confers With Miss Perkins, Walker on Funds for Talking Books.

HELEN KELLER, always interested in aiding the blind, came to Washington yesterday from her home in New York to tell Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, about the recently invented "talking books" for persons who can not see.

According to Miss Keller, the Secretary of Labor received her warmly and expressed interest in a plan whereby the books would be made available to those who can not afford to buy them.

"Miss Perkins listened most patiently. It was our first meeting," said Miss Keller after she had returned to the Carlton Hotel from the Department of Labor. She had the pleasure, she explained, of feeling Miss Perkins' face, her way of "seeing" people. The sensitive fingers of the famous deaf and blind woman found that face to be "noble and expressive with high purpose."

Hopes for PWA Grant.

Miss Keller is hoping an appropriation will be made by PWA or some other Government agency for the manufacture of "talking books."

"It would give employment to a great many people in addition to aiding the blind," she said. She talked the matter over yesterday with Frank Walker, head of the National Emergency Council; received his promise that he would do all he could to aid the project. She has already written to Mrs. Roosevelt, enlisting her aid.

Miss Keller and her constant companion for the last 21 years, Polly Thomson, returned to New York yesterday afternoon. They had hoped to go by airplane but were unable to make reservations. Miss Keller loves to fly.

She was much impressed with the new Labor Building.

"It is beautiful," she said through her interpreter, Miss Thomson. "I touched two of the busts in the hall. And it is fine that the windows are so immense. Light, much light pours in through them." This from Helen Keller who has always lived in darkness.

Humming in Kitchen Tunes 'Up' Voice, Actress Says

Nervousness, Improper Breathing Blamed for Stridence.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

WERE SHE a housewife instead of an actress, Nancy Sheridan, young star who completes a guest engagement at the National Theater this week, would hum all the latest tunes at her kitchen sink. And when she'd hum them through she'd burst into words—first with the music and then without. Surely, she'd leave the windows open. Why not? Nine out of ten neighbors would join in the choruses!

"Humming in the kitchen is like singing in the bathtub," said Miss Sheridan. "It puts one in a happy, relaxed frame of mind. It banishes the worry from physical labor. But best of all it tones up the speaking voice. And voice is the greater part of personality."

What about facial beauty, ability to wear clothes and posture?

"All important, too," she conceded. "But think what a strident or flatly monotonous tone can do to all of them! It's the voice, after all, that sets the personality to music.

Stresses Ear Consciousness.

"Today ear consciousness is overshadowing eye consciousness. We are slavishly dependent upon the telephone. Many people we contact no other way. Our entire appraisal of their characters, backgrounds and personalities is based upon the way the receiver carries their voices to us.

"Then there's the radio. Throughout the day and most of the night it introduces personalities to us. Our impression of them is entirely auditory. They make or break themselves with us in the first few sentences. What they say is often lost through a faulty delivery mechanism. We gladly dial them out of our acquaintance.

"Unconsciously we conjure up a picture of the radio personality's background, his attitude toward life and people, his social and cultural training, his sincerity. Sometimes, perhaps, we are wrong, but that is his fault, not ours. He gave us the wrong impression by not being master of his voice."

Have women more vocal faults than men?

Miss Sheridan believes they have. Some, she says, are sins of omission rather than commission. Women don't relax enough, they can't forget self-consciousness,' they don't breathe properly and they overlook the importance of voice pitch.

"The high, shrill voice, so common to women speakers is due often to nervousness," she said. "And nervousness is due to a lack of mental poise. The wise woman will not speak until she has all the mechanics of voice under control. Once she masters this feat, even intense emotional strain will not rob her of a beautiful tone. It may even enrich it.

"There is no excuse for a woman's voice sounding harsh or strident over the telephone.

"And yet how often the ear is offended by a grating sound that passes for the feminine voice. A deep sustaining breath, a collected thought before taking down the receiver, and a lower-pitched tone will give almost any woman a pleasant telephone personality."

"Then there's the public speaker," recalled the musical-voiced Miss Sheridan. "Many women called upon to make a speech believe they have to break into words as soon as they reach the platform. This is not only unnecessary but unwise. If you have anything to say in the first place, the audience won't rush out on you. It might, if you give it the jitters through your nervous mannerisms or ill-controlled voice.

"The first two seconds can be effectively spent merely looking the audience in the eye. You will find them not nearly so terrifying as you imagined. And in that brief space you can take a few sustaining breaths, relax properly, muster your own mental poise and put your audience completely at ease. This is also true when you face a microphone. A brief pause before you begin often eliminates a good deal of the breathiness common to speakers unaccustomed to the mechanics of broadcasting."

Next to the shrill or harsh tone Miss Sheridan deplores the nasal twang and the monotone, common to women in two different localities of this country. It is the former type, she says, that foreigners frequently identify as the "typical American twang."

Can Be Eliminated, She Says.

"Yet this is only a speech habit," she pointed out. "It can easily be eliminated through religious attention to pitch. Proper breathing and a constant exercise of chest tones will round these voices out beautifully.

"The monotone is more difficult to cope with. It usually means revolutionizing the speaker's mental attitude, pepping up and changing her philosophy of life. It means making her think cheerfully and colorfully and then translate those thoughts into gayer word patterns. Singing lessons will often aid materially toward brightening up such a voice."

Miss Sheridan, who believes she was "most unfortunate indeed" to have won the acclaim of New York critics by her first appearance on Broadway, will leave Washington next week to appear at Elitche's Gardens in Denver. It was there that such stars as Frederic March, Florence Eldrich and Helen Mencken won acclaim before her. And proof that she practices what she preaches were her parting words:

"I'm going to take a two weeks' breathing space before I open there. It will give me time to relax, regain all my mental and physical poise after a long trip and iron out the creaks of my voice."

Women's Voices Faultier Than Men's, Asserts Nancy Sheridan.

Relax as well as think before you speak if you would have a beautiful voice, advises Miss Nancy Sheridan, actress. Miss Sheridan believes many unpleasant feminine voices are caused by nervousness.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

A Bit of Poker.

It is very difficult to bluff Grade A opponents out of a vulnerable game. My wife and I, however, were lucky enough to do so in the early stages of our match against Mr. and Mrs. Sims. They were vulnerable and we were not and instead of losing the rubber right then and there, we actually bid and made a part-score. The perfect par result on the hand is a set of two tricks as a sacrifice at five-odd in our suit but that would have meant a loss of 200 points for us. Actually, we got a plus score.

South, Dealer
East-West vulnerable

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1◇(1)	Dbl.(2)	2◇(3)	Pass(4)
3◇(5)	Pass(6)	Pass	Pass(7)

1—Sound opening bid.
2—The best procedure.
3—Chiefly for bluff purposes.
4—East should take some action at this point with a partner good enough to make a takeout double when vulnerable. East should have given some indication of strength by bidding or three clubs.
5—I feared the worst at this point. Knowing my wife had a pretty bad hand on her failure to redouble, it looked as though opponents had a game. My three diamond bid, consequently, was made not to get to game myself but to make it harder for the opponents.
6—West can not risk doubling again at the level of three-odd, with a partner who has failed to bid.
7—East, not having felt the urge to bid on the previous round, feels even less like gambling at this point.

The Play.

My three diamond contract turned out to be a laydown as I only had to lose two spades, one heart and a club trick. East and West without any difficulty, could have made five-odd in hearts for a vulnerable game and the rubber, or at worst could have doubled a sacrifice contract of five diamonds and beaten it 300 points.

This hand illustrates an old contention of mine. It is very difficult to fool good opponents by psychic bids but they can be fixed if rounds of bidding are taken away from them, by pre-emptive overbids.

What TODAY Means

IF MAY 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

If a woman, and May 11 is your birthday, guard against being extravagant or reckless in money matters. You may be inclined to rush headlong into things, the aftermath being regrets. You will be much happier if you think twice before acting in matters of importance involving social or business obligations. The Horn of Plenty has a great deal to pour into your lap, and abundant store of happiness being among some of the things, with the possibility of a great deal of money being included in its outpouring.

The child born on May 11, while going through the age of adolescence, requires careful personal guidance, as well as actual demonstration of deep affection from its parents.

If a man, and May 11 is your natal day, be careful your generous impulses do not imperil your business interests. If you do not allow sentiment to influence commercial transactions, you probably will make a great deal of money. Politics, insurance, real estate, stocks and bonds, contracting, as well as some branches of art, may provide the right line of activity for you.

Summer Outfit Can Be Bought For Only $25

Book With Itemized Costs Is Available Free at Capital Shop.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SUPPOSE you were to dream that you had a complete summer wardrobe consisting of nine lovely dresses and a swagger coat, and that the whole outfit cost you only $25! Doubtless you'd sigh and say, "But it was only a dream!"

Perhaps even now you'll doubt it when we tell you that your $25 will actually set you up to such a wardrobe. Thanks to the ingenious planning of a large concern, which has made arrangements with pattern and fabric companies, you can buy all the essentials, make your dresses, and still not exceed the allotted amount. As a matter of fact, if you dispense with the evening dress your wardrobe will cost you but $17 and some odd cents. However, once you see the formal frock, you'll be sure to have a yearning for it. It's one of those lovely, simple things made on princess lines.

The large concern that did all this thrifty planning for us has a shop in Washington. You may call there and you'll be presented with a little book which has pictures of each item in the wardrobe, gives the pattern number, tells you how much material to buy, and even lists the type of thread, the amount of binding, the number of buttons, and gives you the cost of these. The book costs nothing and neither does the sewing information, which an expert seamstress will gladly give. And in event you think the pictures in the books flatter the frocks, there are some in the shop already made up, and you can see for yourself what smart things they are.

The swagger coat is made of an off-white homespun. You'll realize in a minute how practical it is for topping off either dark or light dresses. Incidentally, it will take to the tub like a duck to water. Only $2.14 to make it!

Next a sports ensemble of seersucker—you chose your color. It will cost you $3.30!

A shirtwaist frock can be made for $1.71, and a lace knit frock, looking ever so air-cooled, will cost $2.10!

An afternoon dress of a wrinkle-proof voile is winsome and dainty beyond words. Sum total, material, thread, snaps, fagotting, and pattern, $2.08.

An all-purpose frock made of sporty cotton lace is truly a "joy forever" at the price (remember all the prices include everything), is $1.88.

Now, that evening dress, which comes to $5.73. Just wait until you see it!

Next, an all-day frock made of dainty and looking the spirit of summer, totals up to $1.51.

An Eton ensemble of a silky looking cotton seersucker is one of those jacket affairs which every woman needs. It comes to $3.57.

Easy to launder and easy to wash is the smart daytime frock of a striped, checked, or printed fabric. The cost is 98 cents.

Call and let us tell you where to go for all the details of this perfectly planned and sure-to-work-out summer wardrobe.

Inexpensive Book Covers.

Many of the choice volumes in your library may be ever so well kept now. But just you wait! When summer comes and careless readers finger the books with hot and perspiring hands the bindings are soon going to look much the worse for wear. Why not take precautions now? Why not take a few seconds to call at the stationery department of a local store and ask about the inexpensive book covers displayed there? They cost only 47 cents. Once upon a time they were more. You'll guess that easily for they are attractive leather covers lined with moire, all of them simply and tastefully designed. They are available in blue, red, brown, black and green.

Cologne for Mother's Day.

Three silent messengers will carry a world of love to that certain person tomorrow. They are attractive little bottles of cologne fragrant and refreshing. Coming as they do beautifully packaged in an appropriate orchid-colored box bearing the one word "Mother," they make an ideal gift suggestion for Mother's Day.

Three-Cup Coffee Urns.

Now at last comes that convenient three-cup syphon coffee urn! Always it has been a simple matter to find the four or six cup coffee maker, even the two-cup, but when it came to a three-cup size that was a different matter—particularly in syphon style.

That small family, which consists of just Mr. and Mrs., will undoubtedly hail this new household gadget enthusiastically, both because of its handy qualities and because of its modest price. It costs only $1.19!

Flower Fragrance to Fore.

Perfumers agree that floral fragrances have come to the fore this season. Many women have wearied of the heavy scents so luxurious with wintry silks and satins and are choosing those lighter, flower fragrances. One of the most popular is the gardenia perfume put out by one of the oldest perfume houses in America. You'll doubtless be surprised about one feature of it—one drop is equal to the scent of one bloom!

Ellen Glasgow Is Sorry When Novel Is Finished

Writer Has Been Working on a New Volume for 2½ Years.

WHEN THE NOVEL upon which she is now working is finished, Ellen Glasgow will be a little sorry.

"I dread to finish a novel," the author of "Barren Ground," "The Sheltered Life," "The Romantic Comedians" and other distinguished works of fiction, said recently in an interview in New York. She also hates giving interviews, she declared.

"You know when one is writing," Miss Glasgow continued, "the world of the book seems almost more real than the other. When you are done, life is a blind alley for a while. I don't mean I'm happy when I'm working but I'm less happy when I'm not."

For two and a half years she has been at work on the present novel. The recent trip to New York was her first vacation in that time. Most of her life has been spent in her pleasant and dignified old home in Richmond, Va.

Has No Patience With "Whiners."

"I suppose I ought to say that I think the most promising writing in the country is now being done in the South," Miss Glasgow said with a hint of a twinkle in her dark, sharp eyes. "It's probably so, but I'd rather say if the human race is really what it has appeared to be in the last novels of some Southern writers, it is high time for us all to begin chanting the battle hymn of the grasshoppers.

Miss Glasgow declared she had little hope of the world in general getting any better. She has small patience with the twentieth century habit she described as "whining." It seems to her that people got through their troubles in the old days without whining and should be able to do so now.

"I suppose that in some ways, perhaps, the world has improved a little," she said after a contemplative silence. "The worst thing in it is cruelty."

Philosophers, she believes, are far more valuable than scientists. Her recipe for the world's improvement is the study of Socrates and his fellow philosophers.

"War and Peace" by Tolstoy is, to her way of thinking, the best novel in the world. She prefers the Russian writers above all others and of the Russians her favorites are Tolstoy, Dostoievsky and Tchekov.

She believes the state of literature as a whole is better now than it was when she was a girl, writing the first unromantic novels of the South.

The things every author needs, she has found, are sympathy, ability to project oneself into the consciousness of others, ability to see the world largely.

"As for subjects," she said, "why, authors don't find subjects. Subjects find good authors."

Ice Desserts To Win Three Recipe Prizes

IT'S TIME to line up a group of frozen dessert recipes for summer menus. Your favorite frozen dessert will add to this collection, so enter it next week in The Post's recipe contest. Three prizes, $3, $2 and $1, will be awarded the persons who send in the best recipes.

Be sure to include specific directions for freezing as well as preparation of the dessert. State whether it is to be frozen in a crank freezer or the trays of a mechanical refrigerator or if it is suitable to either type of freezing.

Send recipes to Dorothea Duncan, home economics editor of The Washington Post. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Type recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

New Gloves Metal Trimmed.

Paris, May 10 (AP).—Metal trims appear on some of the new gloves. One model of black suede has a cuff banded with a geometrical silver bracelet laced to the glove with black suede strips. Another glove of brown antelope has a short cuff studded with gilded metal nail heads.

Two-Piece Frock for Summer Appropriate for Many Fabrics

Pattern No. 869.

FROCKS that aren't two-piece this summer try to look as though they were. This one really is, and its simple lines make it suitable for almost any sort of fabric—silk crepe, taffeta, linen, or printed cotton, or even flannel or jersey. The drop-shoulder armhole is a flattering way of giving just a bit of a sleeve. It continues the line of the yoke in the back. The skirt is just two pieces, seamed in the front and back. The two perky little bows match the bright novelty belt. This is a blithe and fashionwise addition to any summer wardrobe.

The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. It requires, in size 16 (34), 3½ yards of 35-inch material.

Mrs. I. F. Hale Wins Contest For Appetizers

Recipe for Hors d'Oeuvres Takes First Prize; Virginian Second.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ADD these prize winning recipes to your list of summer appetizers. First prize, $3, in The Post's recipe contest this week is awarded Mrs. I. F. Hale, 338 Madison street northwest, for her recipe for hors d'oeuvres. Second prize, $2, goes to Miss Geraldine Busler, 13 Second street northeast, for her recipe for chilled fruit consomme, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. George Canalle, New Market, Va., for her recipe for anchovy and beet appetizers.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Adelaide Hammond, Clifton Station, Va., for her recipe for tomato juice cocktail; to Mrs. Lowell H. Ewing, 2310 Ashmead place, for her recipe for soup Algiers; to Mrs. Lindell L. Leathers, 1705 Capitol avenue northeast, for her recipe for tomato cups, and to Miss Dorothy Nalley, New Market, Va., for her recipe for pear and cantaloupe cocktail.

Hors d'Oeuvres.

1. Frankfurter sausages which have been steamed, cut in half-inch slices, peeled and marinated with French dressing for one hour. After arranging slices in dish, top each slice with an infinitesimal disc of onion.

2. Slice hard-cooked eggs very thin, marinate in French dressing and dip in powdered parsley.

3. Slice cooked beets, cut with scalloped cookie cutter and garnish in center with dot of finely chopped green papper mixed with French dressing.

4. Cut tender stalks of celery in one-inch pieces and soak in iced lemon water to blanch. Dry and fill with cream cheese mixed with pimientos or with a 50-50 mixture of cream cheese and Roquefort cheese.

5. Slice smoked salmon paper thin and cut in small pieces.

Arrange on a hors d'oeuvres platter and in the center place chopped pickles or pickled red cabbage. Around the outer edge use parsley or lettuce hearts for a garnish. Place in refrigerator to chill before serving.

Chilled Fruit Consomme.

3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca.
1 orange cut into small cubes.
8 thin slices of lemon.
8 mint leaves.
½ cup lemon juice.
½ cup cold water.
½ cup sugar.
⅛ teaspoon salt.

Combine pineapple juice, water and salt and bring to boiling point. Add tapioca and cook until clear, stirring constantly. Then add lemon juice and sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill. Serve in bouillon cups, lightly mixed with the orange cubes. Place a slice of lemon topping it with a mint leaf in each cup. This can be prepared the day before serving; so is especially nice for guest meals. Serves eight.

Anchovy and Beet Appetizers.

3 large boiled beets
3 hard-cooked eggs
6 anchovies, curled
French dressing.

Cut beets in halves, discarding round ends. Marinate in French dressing and chill. Remove the yolks from the eggs and press through a sieve. Chop the egg whites fine. Make a ring of the chopped whites around the edges of each slice of the beet. Fill in the center with the egg yolk and place an anchovy on top. Put on a small plate and surround with tiny sliced sour gherkins, petal fashion.

Serve with anchovy dressing. To make, add two tablespoons anchovies to French dressing and mix well.

Tomato Juice Cocktail.

Strain one can of tomatoes through a sieve. To one pint of this juice add one pint fresh tomato pulp (concentrate) and if too thick add a little water. Season with a few drops of onion juice, a dash of tabasco sauce, few drops of lemon juice, salt to taste, and add a sprig of crushed mint. Serve with crushed ice. If a brighter color is desired, use artificial vegetable coloring.

Soup Algiers.

Roast shelled peanuts in an oven until they are deep brown. Then pulverize them. Stir this paste into a consomme stock until the consistency is that of pea soup. For the final fillip, add cream.

Tomato Cups.

Select good-sized tomatoes and cut off a slice from one end to form a lid for the cup. Scoop out the large round portion, discarding the seeds but saving the pulp in a bowl. When four cups are hollowed out in this manner, cut the dark part out of the lid portion, leaving it doughnut shaped. To the plup of the four tomatoes, add three hard-cooked eggs, chopped up, about six olives (stuffed), sliced fine, salt and pepper, and some mayonnaise mixed to a good consistency. Fill the cups with this mixture, placing an olive in the hole on the top of the lid of each cup. Serve on lettuce with crackers.

Pear-Cantaloupe Cocktail.

1 cantaloupe
1 small bottle of maraschino cherries
1 tablespoon brandy
Grape leaves.

Cut the pears in halves and scoop out the pulp, being careful not to break the skins. Cut the pulp in pieces and combine with balls of cantaloupe. Mix with maraschino juice to which you add a tablespoon of brandy.

Refill pear shells and sprinkle with the chopped maraschino cherries and serve on a grape leaf on a small plate.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Dale promises her husband, Michael, that she will give up her job in a real estate office and keep house for him. But she becomes worried by her mother's debts and goes back to her job to help square the family finances. Mike disapproves, but Mrs. Mallory for once approves Ellen's decision. Ellen is forced to work on the night she and Mike had planned to go to a picnic, but she urges him to go anyway. He does go—and takes Ellen's one-time rival, Marjorie Hutton.

THERE are weeks when everything happens at once.

The week of the picnic was exactly of that type. Mr. Benson went to Chicago on Tuesday to attend a convention of realtors and Mrs. Benson celebrated Wednesday by being sick in bed with an ulcerated tooth.

"You'll have to manage as best you can," she told Ellen by telephone. "I'm sorry. Maybe I'd better long distance Mr. Benson to come home."

"I can manage," Ellen said.

"It's too bad it's the first of the month, with collections and all. Oh, well, honey, do the best you can," and Mrs. Benson put the telephone back on the little table at her side, and went on groaning with her ulcerated tooth.

Doing three people's work at the office was more than Ellen had figured on. It meant that she must be at work early and it meant that she must stay at work late.

Mike Helped Some.

Mike helped at home but he was busy at the office, too. They saw little of each other. Twice during the week they had dinner at home. The other nights Ellen hurried out to get something to eat before going back to the office for another two or three hours of work.

It was Friday night before she got caught up enough with the work to want to venture out of the office early.

She hurried to get things picked up just a little. Smiled with tender indulgence that Mike had left the papers scattered all over the floor. She put his easy slippers where he could find them quickly, and set the table daintily.

It would be like old times to have the evening at home. Her exhaustion seemed to vanish at the thought.

But 6 o'clock came and Michael had not come. It occurred to Ellen to telephone the office. Perhaps he had left word. She rushed to the telephone. Mary Tuttle answered. "I'm glad you called. I was just putting on my hat to leave. In another two minutes I'd have been gone."

Ellen's heart sank. That meant, then, that Michael was on his way home. But just to make sure: "Has that husband of mine left?"

"He went at three," Mary said. "He left a message if you called. He said he wasn't certain that you'd be home for dinner and he hadn't heard from you. He said if you called to tell you that he was going out to the country club to play golf, and if you were going to be home to call him there. Otherwise he'll stay out there for dinner."

Ellen replaced the receiver on its hook. Then taking it off again started to dial the country club number. If she hurried she could catch Michael before he sat down to dinner. She'd tell him that dinner was waiting at home. Dinner and good company.

Suspicions Confirmed.

And then, suddenly the number half dialed, she replaced the receiver on its hook. Dinner and good company. She was remembering Marjorie Hutton's pleasure in the game of golf and remembering, oddly enough at the same time, that Michael hadn't played a game of golf in weeks.

She called herself a jealous, spying cat as she seized the telephone book, turning the leaves with trembling fingers. One call would confirm her suspicions.

Her suspicions were confirmed.

Marjorie Hutton's mother answered. "Marjorie played golf this afternoon and she just called in to tell me she's staying out for dinner with some of her friends. Who shall I tell her called?"

So Michael and Marjorie were playing golf together. It sounded like an innocent enough evening, but to Ellen the end of the world had come.

She cleared away the dinner things untouched.

Michael's mother came over in the evening. "I haven't seen you in days, Ellen," she explained. "John's off on his calls. He wanted me to come along, but I told him I hadn't visited with you children for ages. Where's Michael?"

Then, answering her own question, "I suppose he's busy down at the garage? Business seems to have taken an upturn, don't you think, Ellen?"

She laughed, "I know John's business has. I wanted him to get away for a week on a little fishing spree before winter actually closes down but he says he just can't. The stork's gone on a tremendous outbreak and he can't get away."

Ellen was grateful that her mother-in-law had explained Mike's absence to herself. "He is working pretty hard lately. Business does seem better."

"That's good." Mary Dale looked around her daughter-in-law's home approvingly. She was fond of Ellen.

Michael came presently. But Ellen's mood was too bitter, her spirits had been too low for change to elation over the fact that if Michael and Marjorie had dined together it must have been a short and perhaps unsatisfactory meal.

"I didn't know you were home," Michael said gravely, kissing her. "I went to the country club for dinner."

They walked home with Mary through the gathering night. "I'm afraid," Mike's mother said, "that winter will come early. Aren't the nights cold?"

"Late October. Time for the nights to be cold," Michael said.

Honeymoon Over.

Mary wanted them to come in. And wouldn't they come for Sunday dinner? They mustn't be so formal now. The honeymoon was certainly over. Weren't they old married folk already?

Ellen decided that the honeymoon was indeed over as she walked back to the little house with Michael. He talked, to be sure, but pleasantly, formally, as one might converse with a near stranger.

Ellen told him so, with bitter frankness. "I think maybe you'll be calling me Miss Mallory next thing I know," she said. "You act like a perfect stranger."

"We are almost strangers," Michael said with equal bitterness. "Let's see, we've dined together twice this week, haven't we?"

Immediately after she had answered him, Ellen wished desperately that she hadn't in that fashion—"Well, Marjie Hutton rates 50 per cent then. She dined with you at least once this week—maybe more for all I know."

"Marjorie Hutton was at the country club tonight," Michael said slowly. "I suppose you know that or you wouldn't speak as you do. But she did not dine with me. She didn't even go with me. I met her there by chance."

But a jealous demon was tearing at Ellen. "By chance? Mike, that's a good one. Do you think I'm going to believe that? You haven't played golf in weeks.

"And then, all of a sudden you both go out to the club, play golf all afternoon, both of you stay to dinner. And then you expect me to believe that was mere chance. Well, Michael, I'm not that gullible even if you do think I am."

Beginning of End.

"I guess," Mike said slowly, "that you'll believe what you want to believe and that nothing I can say will change your mind."

Mike was like that—maddening. And there was nothing to do but accept the statement. But in her heart Ellen knew it was the beginning of the end.

Parisians Adopt British Queen's Coiffure Style

Fashionables, after laughing for many years at Queen Mary's coiffure, now have come around to adopting it. The "Queen Mary" coiffure has made its debut in Paris with Great Britain's jubilee year, Associated Press reports.

The new coiffure sweeps back in soft waves from the ears, up from the nape of the neck and ends in a cluster of soft curls on the top and back of the head. It sometimes falls softly over the forehead, however, in a manner suggesting fringe or bangs.

Ornaments are still being used in evening coiffures. Diadems of glass, lacquered flowers, creamy camelias tucked into the side of the coiffure and jeweled coil clips studded with jewels holding back a cluster of curls are all seen.

Hood Inducts Dr. H. I. Stahr As President

More Than 100 Colleges Represented at Inauguration.

New Leader Emphasizes Need for Educational Readjustments.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 11.—Presidents, deans and representatives of more than 100 colleges throughout the East joined with Gov. Harry W. Nice here today in the inauguration of Dr. Henry I. Stahr as president of Hood College. Dr. Stahr takes the office of Dr. Joseph H. Apple, a founder and president of the school for 41 years.

Exercises began at 11 a. m. with the formal procession of college representatives in academic gown. The double file of well-known educators and degree holders included Gov. Nice, Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president of Wellesley College; Dr. Stahr, Dr. Apple and presidents of virtually all colleges of the East, and extended almost a quarter of a mile across the lawns of the campus.

At the inauguration ceremony the new president outlined his program. He pointed out the benefits of a college education for women.

"Abilities must be developed in our students which will enable them to cope successfully with the new problems and new duties which they will eventually have," he said.

Cites Swift Changes.

Far-reaching changes affecting the world are demanding fundamental changes in educational procedure, he asserted. "The scientific and machine age will make possible quick dissemination of ideas throughout distant quarters of the world, the rise of a new social, political, and economic order. These and other changes we are witnessing require important readjustments in our educational procedure," Dr. Stahr added.

In a lighter vein, he told of the "mildly persuasive and parental interest Hood takes in its students."

Dr. Stahr comes to Hood College after serving as the executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the Reformed Church of the United States. His home was in Merion, Pa., where he served as clergyman and took active part as a national executive of the Reformed Church.

Traces Women's Education.

Prior to the induction, Miss Pendleton, 80-year-old president of Wellesley, spoke on the increasing trend for the education of women in the last 100 years. She added that although education for women has advanced at a steady pace, there still remains a dearth of centers devoted to such education.

The Rev. Henry L. G. Kieffer presided over the induction and conducted the installation. Invocation was delivered by Dr. Apple. Before his retirement, Dr. Apple was the oldest college president in point of service. His 41 years in raising the college to its present position was constantly referred to by those delivering addresses.

At a luncheon given following the inauguration, Dr. Boyd Edwards, headmaster of Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy, was toastmaster. Gov. Nice paid tribute to Hood and its new president.

Turning lightly to political aspects of the inauguration, the Maryland executive said:

"I strongly suspect that Dr. Stahr, a Pennsylvania Republican, is taking refuge in the newly declared Republican State of Maryland."

One hundred and ten colleges and universities were officially represented at Dr. Stahr's inauguration. They were, in order of founding:

St. John's College, President Amos W. W. Woodcock; Yale University, David Schley Schaff; University of Pennsylvania, Dean Merle Middleton Odgers; Moravian Seminary and College for Women, President Edwin Joseph Heath; Princeton University, Alexander Armstrong; Washington and Lee University, Edward S. Record Apple Crop Seen for Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 10.—One of the best apple yields in years in the Timberville fruit area of Rockingham County was forecast today by Howard S. Zigler, former member of the House of Delegates, and Stanley Hoover, two of the leading orchardists in the area.

Both admitted, however, that there will be few peaches because of the late freeze. Timberville, next to Crozet, is the largest peach-growing area in Virginia.

Virginia Child Has Stomach in Chest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 10. Bessie Yarhouse, 6-week-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron C. Yarhouse, of Port Conway, Va., who has been in Mary Washington Hospital since Sunday following the discovery that her stomach was in her chest, was taken to a Richmond hospital today.

While the child's stomach is not inverted, as was the case of Alyce Jane McHenry, who underwent a successful operation in Fall River, Mass., the cases are said to be similar. An immediate operation is not contemplated as the child is too weak to stand the strain. However, she is not believed in extreme danger and possibly within a few months an operation may be performed to place the organ in its proper place.

Somerset Will Sell Lands for Tax June 4

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, May 10.—The sale of property to satisfy delinquent taxes will be started in Somerset County June 4, with 93 tracts in the west Princess Anne district the first scheduled to go.

For the past several years very little property in the county has been sold for taxes, but collections of late have been so slow that the sales are necessary.

Stockholders In Closed Bank Sued by State

Third Group Is Named in Action Involving Central Trust.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 10.—A third suit to collect from stockholders of the defunct Central Trust Co. was filed in the circuit court by John J. Ghingher, State bank commissioner and former receiver for the closed institution and its 11 branch banks. Sixty-five stockholders were named as defendants.

The suit brought the total to 233 stockholders who have been made defendants in such cases, 73 in the first and 95 in the second. Some of those in the first suit have paid their assessments. The defendants are listed in alphabetical order from "F" to "I" and the amount of stock they hold ranges from 10 to 240 shares, some of the defendants having paid part of their assessment. It is expected that additional suits will be entered until all of the stockholders who have not settled their liability assessment are made defendants.

Dora U. Fahrney, Hagerstown, 10 shares; William B. Fawley, Poolesville, 30; Ammia M. Fella, Emmitsburg, 15, paid $2.30; Margaret C. Firor, Hagerstown, 23; E. U. Firor, Thurmont, 10; Minnie I. State to Ask U. S. Quash Land Case

High Court Jurisdiction in Shenandoah Fought.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 10.—The Commonwealth will challenge the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Shenandoah Park land condemnation case in a motion for dismissal to be filed in Washington Monday, Attorney General A. P. Staples said today.

The case—that of Robert H. Via against the State commission on conservation and development—challenges the constitutionality of the park condemnation act.

A three-judge Federal court at Harrisonburg held the act constitutional. The petitioner appealed to the Supreme Court.

Confederate Flag, Letter Of Lee Given to School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., May 10.—Maj. Robert A. McIntyre, member of the Faquier County Bar, was selected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, of Upperville, to present a Confederate flag, and a copy of a letter of Robert E. Lee to the Upperville High School yesterday. The flag and letter were received by W. E. Tyler, principal of the school.

Maj. McIntyre delivered an address on the similarity between the United States Constitution and the Constitution of the Confederate States of America.

Tyson Mansion in Knoxville Dedicated to Student Youths

Mrs. Gilpin, of Boyce, Va., Makes Gift of Place to Episcopal Church.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Boyce, Va., May 10.—Mrs. Isabelle Tyson Gilpin, wife of Kenneth N. Gilpin, nationally known horse breeder of Boyce, has given to St. John's Episcopal Church, of Knoxville, Tenn., her family mansion there for use in work among the student youth of Knoxville as a memorial to her father and mother, Gen. and Mrs. Laurence D. Tyson.

The Tyson mansion, long the home of a family that has occupied a conspicuous part in the life of Tennessee, contains a chapel, library, large parlor and lounging rooms. Students may use it for parties, small dances, bridge, discussion groups or merely as a place to drop in during the day or evening. Also the large ballroom is available for entertainments or lectures.

Dedication of the house as a part of St. John's parish has just been made. Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee; President Hoskins, of the University of Tennesee, and the rector of St. John's officiated, while Episcopal clergymen and officials from all parts of the State attended. The place was dedicated as the Bettie and Laurence Tyson Memorial.

Bishop Gailor spoke of Gen. and Mrs. Tyson as typifying the highest and best that the lineage and culture of the South could produce, mentioning the distinguished and valorous career of Gen. Tyson as a citizen, soldier and statesman, and the grace and charm of Mrs. Tyson which made the Tyson home famous for its hospitality throughout the South and beyond. President Hoskins mentioned Mrs. Tyson's father, the late Col. Charles M. McGhee, financier and railroad builder.

Gen. Tyson was a graduate of West Point, a military instructor at the University of Tennessee, saw service in the World War and was later a member of the United States Senate from Tennessee.

Women's Clubs Vote in Favor Of Birth Control

Mrs. Alexander Is Elected President of Virginia Federation.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., May 10.—The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs this afternoon went on record as favoring liberalization of Federal laws excluding birth control matter from the mails.

Adoption of a resolution to this effect, which will be forwarded to the general federation meeting in Detroit next month, came immediately after the delegates had heard Mrs. Thomas Hepburn, mother of Katharine Hepburn, the actress, declare in an address in Lee Chapel that it is "crucially necessary to have birth control."

Mrs. Hepburn in her address cited the number of children born to families on relief rolls at present, and the resulting necessary expenditures to care for the children. "Birth control information," she said, "should be given to the type of people who need it."

Other resolutions adopted today, which will be sent to the general federation meeting, included one requesting that the general federation reiterate its stand favoring the World Court; one asking universal fingerprinting for identification purposes, and a request that the general federation urge State organizations to obtain Federal aid for child health work.

Gen. and Mrs. Lejeune of Virginia Military Institute were at home to the delegates and visitors this afternoon following the closing business session.

At the morning session, Mrs. Fred Alexander, of Newport News, was named president for the next term. Other officers named were Miss Lucille Bland, of West Point, vice president; Mrs. E. G. Currin, jr., of Meredithville, recording secretary; Mrs. R. E. Pettus, jr., of Keysville, treasurer, and Mrs. L. J. Giles, of Clifton Forge, retiring president, State director.

New district presidents ratified this morning were Mrs. R. G. Boatwright, of Coeburn, first district; Mrs. H. Russell Robey, of Buena Vista, second; Mrs. W. H. Lacey, of Halifax, third; Mrs. M. G. Willis, of Fredericksburg, fourth; Mrs. E. C. Bryce, of Richmond, fifth; Mrs. L. L. Newby, of Norfolk, sixth, and Mrs. M. A. Cross, of Suffolk, seventh.

$328,000 Cut Due in Virginia School Funds

Action Is Anticipated to Keep State's Deficit to a Minimum.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 10.—Virginia's public schools probably will be called upon to sacrifice $328,000 of their appropriation for 1935-36 in order that the State's deficit can be held to a minimum, it appeared today.

State fiscal authorities pointed to a budget law provision specifying that $328,000 appropriated by the General Assembly should not become available unless the Governor certifies to the comptroller that expenditure of the fund would not create or add to a deficit in the State's general fund.

Inasmuch as present calculations indicate that the deficit will stand at more than $1,000,000 at the close of the current fiscal year, it was believed that the mandatory provision of the budget law would take effect.

It was brought out that school authorities were given to understand when the provisional appropriation was made that they could ask the next General Assembly to make up any deficit that might be incurred in the school fund during the biennium.

Bids Asked for New Staunton Postoffice

Staunton, Va., May 10.—Bids have been called for Staunton's new $110,000 Federal building on June 3, but apparently it will be at least September 1 before work of razing the present structure will be started.

The new postoffice building will be located on the site of the present building, but thus far the Government has not leased temporary quarters here. Allowing 60 days for putting the temporary quarters in condition, presuming that there would be some delay in passing on the bids for construction of the new building after the closing date of June 3, it would be perhaps August 15 before the change is made.

Fate of Relief In Maryland Hangs on Tax

FERA'S Ban Puts Full Load on Contested Sales Levy.

$300,000 Yield in May Vital to Curtailed Program.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 10. — Developments today made it clear that the immediate future of Maryland's relief program depends on the success of the 1 per cent gross receipts tax—a tax which is to be contested in the courts.

State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein, faced with a Federal ultimatum that no more Federal funds would be forthcoming for May, was openly pessimistic. Gov. Harry W. Nice expressed the hope that the receipts levy would produce enough to carry a "cut-to-the-bone program" of relief.

Only three courses are open to relief officials, Greenstein said, and any one of them would "work real hardship." He listed them as:

The State's relief program may be halted completely.

Some relief clients can be cut off the rolls in arbitrary fashion in order to bring down the cost.

$1,000,000 on Hand.

In a formal statement, the State relief official said in part:

"We had about $100,000 that remained over from April. The FERA is giving us $900,000. That makes a total of $1,000,000 we have so far. Of this amount we have already allocated $750,000 to carry the program through the fifteenth of the month. "That leaves us with just $250,000 for the last two weeks.

"In the light of the FERA's refusal to grant us more money, and in the light of the very real uncertainty about the gross receipts tax revenue, we are facing the most serious relief crisis in the State's history."

Greenstein added that he felt that income from the gross receipts "was very uncertain."

$300,000 Needed.

Gov. Nice said:

"If the gross receipts tax does raise $300,000 this month, then I think we will be able to get along without any really drastic reductions. The relief load would have to be cut sharply, of course, but that is being done. I think the $300,000 would let us get by."

Participating in the three-day celebration of Virginia court week beginning today in Williamsburg, Va., will be the William and Mary Players who will present scenes from the "Jealous Wife" this evening on the site of the first theater in this country. The play was first produced in Drury Lane in 1730. The committee for the arrangement of the event includes many people known for their interest in State history and its preservation, and includes Theodore S. Cox, chairman, Miss Ellen Bagby, of the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities; B. Floyd Flickinger, Vernon M. Geddy, Channing M. Hall, Miss Althea Hunt, Mrs. A. Drewry Jones, Miss Jeannette S. Kelly, A. L. Meisel, B. W. Norton and George M. Small.

The council of the Orange County (Va.) Parent-Teachers Association, of which Miss Eleanor Decker is president, will meet today for an all-day picnic at Clarks Mountain. Later in the afternoon, members of the council will be entertained by Mrs. W. H. Dunn on her estate, Dunsale Mountain.

Members of the staff of Martha Jefferson Hospital, Charlottesville, Va., will observe Hospital Day this afternoon with special services on the lawn. The program will start with a group of dances by pupils of the Redland School of Dancing. Mayor Dan W. Hayden will be the principal speaker.

The annual flower show of the Arlington Women's Club will be held in the community hall on May 27. Mrs. J. B. Lowell was recently re-elected president of the club.

The Black Horse Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy of Warrenton, Va., will observe Memorial Day with services in memory of Jefferson Davis, whose birthday comes on the following day. In charge of the program are Miss Emily W. Fletcher, president of a chapter; Miss Janet Hamilton, Miss Catherine Sowers, Mrs. F. A. Vose and Mrs. D. P. Wood, jr.

Ethel Barrymore Will Be National Players' Guest Star in "The Constant Wife"

Maugham Play To Be Revived Week of May 20

First of Visiting Stars; Miss Lewis' New Play; Theater Gossip.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Ethel Barrymore, whose name invariably and inevitably is included in every assumptive list of the "first ladies of the American theater", will be guest star at the National Theater the week beginning Monday, May 20. That is the bill that will open immediately following the presentation of "The Bishop Misbehaves", the piece to be presented next week.

Miss Barrymore, one of the most distinguished actresses the native stage can boast, will appear in a revival of one of her outstanding hits, W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife", a play in which she first appeared in 1927.

It was Daniel Frohman's recent declaration that if there is to be a national civic theater in the Nation's Capital, the time-honored National Theater should be it, that largely influenced Miss Barrymore to accept Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's invitation to be his guest star week after next.

In reply to his wire, she expressed a deep-rooted affection for the playhouse in which so many of her greatest successes have been recorded and a keen interest in the nebulous possibility that at some remote date it might become somewhat in the nature of a national shrine of Thespis.

Earlier Hits Recalled.

There is no need to go into the long history of Ethel Barrymore's eminence in the theater. There is, however, an irresistible inclination to recall some of the major achievements in which this commentator has seen, enjoyed and admired her. His recital would go back to the first days of her stardom in "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" and would include mention of such others of her innumerable triumphs as "Sunday," "Mid-Channel," in which Eugene O'Brien, later of movie fame, was her leading man; "Declasse," "Scarlet Sister Mary," "Alice-Sit-By-the-Fire," "Trelawney of the Wells," "The Witness For the Defense," "Cousin Kate," "The Lady of the Camelias," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "The Kingdom of God," "The School for Scandal," "Our Mrs. McChesney" and a long catalogue of additional memorable evenings in the theater.

Miss Barrymore's engagement at the National the week of the 20th, of course, displaces the previously announced presentation of "The Outsider."

Others to Come.

It also bears out the veiled suggestion made in this column when the engagement of Florence Reed in "The Shanghai Gesture" was first announced that other stars of the first rank were being negotiated for by the energetic and resourceful S. Cochran. Not only was Ethel Barrymore in mind at the time but also Otis Skinner and others of similar standing.

It is the hope of this column that Mr. Cochran in his quest for stars to illuminate the most propitious season he and his National Theater players have enjoyed in many years will not fail to give consideration to Frances Starr, an actress who by every standard of judgment must be included in the first flight; Tullio Carminati, who recently scored so decisively on the screen as leading man with Grace Moore in "One Night of Love," and one or two others who might be named.

But, perhaps, at the moment, the signing of Ethel Barrymore to a contract is coup enough for any repertoire management.

Katharine Hepburn gives scant thought to time and space, thereby betraying a sort of kinship with Prof. Einstein, relativity and one thing and another. I mean to say that yesterday Miss Hepburn enplaned in Hollywood for New York to read the script of a stage play she may do. She would be reading the play today, taking ship again for the Coast late in the afternoon and, if this schedule holds—which it probably will not—would be back at the studio in Hollywood on Saturday. It could be done. We left our desk one afternoon at 1:30, flew to Philadelphia, interviewed Barbara Stanwyck for no especial reason, motored to the Camden airport and were back at this typewriter at 8:10 p. m., and nobody knew we ever had been away. Not that it matters.

The Dramatic Club of American University tonight will present "Much Ado About Nothing," as its ninth annual Shakespearean production in the gymnasium auditorium on the campus, Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues.

Under the direction of Will Hutchins, professor of art and dramatic coach, the play will be put on with swift continuity, scenery of simple design and costuming of some elaborateness.

A long student cast has been under intensive training for this event for many weeks. Elizabeth Gray, daughter of the Chancellor and Mrs. Gray, will be leading woman with Duane Covert, of this city, playing opposite.

Walter C. Kelly, the "Virginia Judge" of vaudeville fame, who appears in one of the stellar roles in the new film version of "McFadden's Flats," opening today at the Metropolitan, is giving away the flats as mementos to his friends. He is giving them away one flat at a time. At least that is my assumption, based on fairly firm ground. Yesterday afternoon there was found reposing on my desk a carefully tinfoil-wrapped and silk-ribboned package that looked as if it ought to have been a box of candy. What it really was was an ordinary building brick—very ordinary, as a matter of fact, what with the nicks in the edges and all—that might be cracked up into a fine batch of "alley apples." With it was a note reading as follows: "Walter C. Kelly, 'The Virginia Judge,' starring in 'McFadden's Flats,' which opens at the Metropolitan tomorrow, wishes you to accept one of the original bricks from McFadden's flats." Okay, I accept, so what?

Ann Views Ann.

Miss Ann Dvorak will be the guest of Manager Harry E. Lohmeyer, of the Earle Theater, tonight to see Ann Dvorak, James Cagney and Margaret Lindsay in "G Men," the first of the pictures attacking the gangster motif from the angle of the governmental agencies of retributive justice.

This Ann Dvorak, however, is a Washingtonian and a secretary, instead of a Californian and a motion picture actress, married to Leslie Fenton.

It is reported, nevertheless, that like her screen namesake she is a tall, attractive brunette. But where does the idea come from that Ann Dvorak, the screen player, is tall?

Joe E. Brown, mammoth-mawed comic of the stage and screen—mostly screen—is convinced that everything revealed during the action of "G Men," in which Jimmy Cagney, Ann Dvorak, Robert Armstrong and all the rest open on the screen at the Earle Theater today, is on the up and up. It appears that Joe was flying from San Francisco back to his home in Los Angeles a day or two ago when the plane, in violation of its every printed schedule, was grounded at Fresno, Calif. Department of Justice agents were awaiting its landing and plucked from its passenger list a Chinese dope smuggler who was caught red-handed with quite a consignment of narcotics concealed about his person. Joe now thinks "G Men" is wholly on the level—as it probably is.

Bob Bobs Up.

Speaking of Robert Armstrong—and why not?—that young actor was born in Saginaw, Mich., despite the fact that he is most often given credit for being a West Coaster. Although born in Michigan, his family moved to Seattle, Wash., when he was a mere babe and his education was received there. He finally graduated in law from Washington University. In his senior year he wrote and played in a skit which came to the notice of a vaudeville producer who offered him and his skit a job on his circuit.

The bookings took him to New York, where his uncle, the late Paul Armstrong, author of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and many other successes, took him under his wing and gave him small parts in his plays, as they came along. His professional career, like so many others, was interrupted by the war. Returning to America, he "road-showed" in "The Man Who Came Back" and other plays.

His biggest hit on Broadway was in "Is Zat So?" with Jimmy Gleason. It was while playing in this piece on the West Coast that he was offered a motion picture contract. His first picture was "The Main Event." In "G Men," at the Earle, he has a practically ideal assignment. So now you know.

The Columbia Players announce as the sixth production of their season a new play by Dorothea Lewis, "Where Masks Are Worn." It will be presented at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, for the first time on any stage on Wednesday and Thursday, June 5 and 6. Miss Lewis, a valued member of this department's reviewing staff, will herself direct the production, for which necessary incidental music has been composed by Adolf Torovsky. The settings are being designed by Jane Lasater Rubey.

Casual Inquiry Note.

Did it ever occur to you that it is the girl with the least principle that usually draws the most interest?

They Continue on Local Screens

The agreeable young woman above at left is Elizabeth Allan, remembered for a fine performance opposite Clark Gable in "Men in White," but more immediately notable for the excellence of her work with Lionel Barrymore and Bela Lugosi in "The Mark of the Vampire," which continues for a second week at the Columbia. The elderly and austere gentleman above at right is that eminent Russian basso, Feodor Chaliapin, who carries on on the screen of the Belasco in the title role of "Don Quixote," G. B. Pabst's picturization of the story by Cervantes. Both of these are worth seeing.

The life of Henry VIII was relived last evening, especially that portion involving Cardinal Wolsey, Catharine of Aragon and Anne Boleyn, as the Shakespeare Society presented Shakespeare's "King Henry VIII", under the auspices of the Community Center Department, before an audience of more than a thousand.

With a galaxy of local thespians in the 20-odd roles, wherein nearly all are quite above their individual average, the play was excellently acted, directed by Arthur Rhodes with care and precision, and colorfully staged.

Two main stories stand out in the version as presented—that of Henry's divorce from Catherine and subsequent remarriage to Anne and that of Cardinal Wolsey's fall from power. Credit should go to Maurice Jarvis for a well-nigh flawless portrayal of the scarlet-robed Cardinal Wolsey.

The interpretation of Henry given by Jesse Veitch, while lacking that eloquent uncouthness of Charles Laughton, was none the less effective, making of the king something more than a mere philanderer. Anne Boleyn (Bullen, as the purists spell it) was played by Yerby Pannill with quiet distinction. To Mabel Owens Wilcox fell the task of portraying Queen Catherine.

Other outstanding performances were turned in by John Sikken, as the Duke of Buckingham; Thomas Cahill, as usher to the queen; Christine Irish, especially for her vocal solo; J. Stanley Protheroe, as the Cardinal's secretary, and Charles A. Bell, as the Earl of Surrey.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., May 10. — The sesquicentennial of the Diocese of Virginia will be held in St. Paul's Church in King George County Tuesday.

Morning services will be conducted by the Right Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, bishop of Southern Virginia.

The celebration will close at 8 p. m. at St. George's Church, in Fredericksburg, with the services conducted by the Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, jr., D. D., rector of St. Paul's in Richmond.

London—Trading was cheerful and prices firm on the stock exchange today due to renewed investment buying under which Argentine rails, industrials and gilt-edged securities benefitted. Aviation shares soared on the air ministry's request for aircraft and engine manufacturers to speed up production. Oils were firmer on dividend anticipations, while gold mining shares eased. The market closed firm.

Paris—French industrial shares continued their gains on the bourse today, while rentes showed a slight decline. International issues remained strong along with gold mining, rubber and Belgian stocks. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Purchases stiffened on the boerse today, and the market closed firm.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Under a Broadway Moon.

New York, May 10.

San Francisco calling: "Ed, this is Kim (Mrs. Jim Moffett). Please deny for Jim and myself and the youngsters that the Bob Moffetts are heading for Reno. I just left them, and they are as happy as they can be. They're furnishing a five-room apartment house on Chicago's North Shore, and just to show how silly those New York rumors are, Ruth gets up every morning at 5:30 to drive Bob to his business" . . . The Bob (Paramount) Weitmans expect Sir Zukor Stork in July! . . . Gertrude Niesen follows Sophie Tucker into the Hollywood on the 16th, with Sophie probably shifting across the river to Ben Marden's Riviera . . . Archie Mayo takes off for the Coast on Sunday Charlie and Joe Moscowitz, Red Cann, Al Lichtmann, Jack (Columbia) Cohn, Lou Irwin, Ham Fisher and Bob Goldstein partied him last night at the Warwick) . . . Add Ironies: Junior Durkin, killed in that Coast tragedy, had already been signed for the part that would have made him overnight, the part of the boy in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah Wilderness."

• • • •

Hottest spot in town is the Famous Door, which takes its name from a door near the bar which is covered with autographs of big shots, little shots, and all-shots . . . It is a long, narrow room, and at the far end, Louis Prima and his five-piece band give out the hot music that made the place an overnight hit . . . Prima is a New Orleans kid, Italian, and he really blisters a cornet . . . Equally hot on a clarinet is Pee Wee Russell, a St. Louis genius of melody, and the melodic duels of the sad-faced Pee Wee and the animated Prima are something to write home about . . . Gary McAdams, the guitar operator, is from Boston, and holder of a bachelor of science degree from fair Harvard, but his B. S. is completely forgotten as he sits in the half-darkness of the Famous Door, strumming his guitar for the enjoyment of Broadwayites, whose only knowledge of Harvard is the rating of its last football team . . . John Ryan, a Schenectady lad, is the bass player, and Frank Pinera, of New Orleans, is the pianist.

• • • •

In Hollywood, if you want to get the correct time on the dial phone, you dial R-U-S-S-I-A and listen in . . . The whole town is upset over the serious illness of Ben Throup, Ruby de Remer's husband (shoot him a wire at the Harbor Sanitarium to cheer him up) . . . Will Rogers' filly, Mary, visiting the Coast, was escorted by Bill Hackley, Salvatore Monaco, a Spanish bull fighter, and Howard Hughes (Hughes meets all the incoming planes from the East to date the new talent) . . . Jack La Rue and Connie Simpson are again headed for the preacher . . . Myrna Loy just missed the plane that killed Senator Cutting and two other passengers, waiting over until the following day so that Leland Hayward could keep her company! . . . The Norma Shearer-Irving Thalberg rumors are only rumors . . . Jimmy Dunn-Patricia Lee twosome begins to look serious . . . Did Joey Jacobson, Chez Paree emir, blow $15,000 on the Kentucky Derby?

• • • •

Prettiest class of girls in the profession, I think, are the vocalists with the bands . . . Leah Ray, with the Phil Harris Band; Dorothy Crane, with the Bernie Cummings Band; Harriett Hilliard, with Ozzie Nelson; Maxine Marlow, with Phil Spitalny; Maxine Gray, with Hal Kemp—all of these definitely are gorgeous eyefuls . . . Oddly enough, Guy Lombardo and Eddy Duchin, two of the biggest-salaried outfits on Tin Pan Alley, don't use gal warblers . . . Louise Powell, who vocalized with Joe Reichmann in St. Louis last year, weds him May 28 . . . Patricia Gale, another girl vocalist, is hot-spotting with Leon Navarra . . . Paul Sabin marries Virginia Paxton June 19.

• • • •

Harry Richman, despite an infected heel, wouldn't postpone his Versailles opening (everybody in town had made reservations) . . . Detroit's Paradise-on-the-Lake will feature big name bands, following Paul Whiteman with Abe Lyman on June 5, and booking Rudy Vallee and Fred Waring in addition . . . John Steinberg is back at Pavillon Royale . . . Yermi Stern will operate a Jersey spot for the summer . . . Haverstraw, N. Y., looked like Broadway last night, Jack Dempsey presenting Jim Farley with an elk's head and the Postmaster General presenting it to the B. P. O. E. lodge . . . Clyde Lucas, maestro at the New Yorker, clicked here after a long run at Seymour Weiss' Roosevelt in New Orleans.

• • • •

Brian Aherne has been escorting Frances Marion . . . The Joe Levys (he's the Broadway bookmaker) expect Sir Mutuel Stork any day . . . Recommended: The Actors' Dinner Club at the Woodstock . . . Aside to Detroiters: Look up Keller Sisters and Lynch this week and say hello for me! . . . Bennie Rajah, the kid who used to be with Jimmy Durante, is now at Connie's Inn . . . Leslie McLeod, who was in "Hit the Deck," will operate the Larchmont Country Club this summer with special rates for pros . . . Get a load of young Jack (Zits) Eigen on WMCA Mondays (very tasty, Jacko) . . . William Powell is plenty dissatisfied with "Masquerade," from which Myrna Loy took a walkout (her sub, Louise Ranier, looks like a comer, not beautiful, but loads of personality) . . . The Frank Mitchells (Mitchell and Durante) expect a second baby in October . . . Best bet among the younger actresses: Helen Lynd, who has that certain something!

Seaman Is Held 'Dead,' Wife Gets Insurance

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 10.—John K. Naylon, a plumber, was held "legally dead" by a jury in the Circuit Court here yesterday and his widow awarded $2,127.50 in a suit to collect on a $3,000 life insurance policy.

The insurance company claimed that Naylon returned to Cumberland in 1932 and while here said that he preferred to work as a fitter on ships at sea, that he had learned his trade at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and liked sea life. It was indicated that the insurance company would ask a new trial.

Berryville Honors Fire Unit's Founder

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., May 10.—As a memorial to the late John H. Enders, who organized the Berryville Fire Company, the town council has voted that this company shall hereafter be known as the Enders Fire Department.

To house fire equipment the council recently purchased the old Hardesty livery stable property, where a suitable building will be erected. Charles Enders, son of the organizer, is captain of the company.

Branding Urged for Fowl.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 10.—In an effort to stamp out chicken thefts, John A. Shipley, sheriff of Carroll County, has advised farmers to brand poultry. A system of tattooing, used in other sections, has led to the apprehension of a number of chicken thieves, according to the sheriff.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Principal foreign moneys moved narrowly against the dollar in world exchange dealings yesterday.

In London the dollar lost ground at 4.85¼ to the pound sterling, while in later New York transactions the trend was continued, with the pound at 4.85¼, up ⅛ of a cent.

The American unit improved mildly in Paris at the equivalent of 6.587 cents to the French franc, while in subsequent New York dealings the franc was even at 6.59 cents.

"Hey, wait! You've forgotten something!"

THERE YOU ARE, all packed up, ready for a summer vacation at Point Sunburn or Mountain Perch, and you think you're going to have the time of your life . . . but you've forgotten the one thing that will make your vacation perfect! Why, you've forgotten to arrange for delivery of The Washington Post . . . your morning paper . . . to your vacation address. And what sort of a vacation would it be if you didn't keep in touch with the New Deal's activities, or the Senators' batting average, or the adventures of Dick Tracy?

But we've fixed things so that you may continue to read The Post at the breakfast table each morning . . . all you have to do is to telephone The Post, give your vacation address, the date on which you want Vacation Delivery to begin. We'll do the rest. Just telephone

Canzoneri Batters Lou Ambers to Regain Lightweight Crown

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 10.

UNDER the mellowing influence of a half dozen beers, a Washington ball player went philosophical this evening when a few of the boys were gathered in the lobby of the Nats' hotel near the palms, which were potted. He shall remain nameless because Mr. Clark Griffith, a teetotaler himself, does not look kindly upon his athletes who imbibe, and because, futhermore, Mr. Griffith hires his athletes to play ball and not to spout talk that might picture baseball as something other than a model sport for young America.

POVICH.

But it required only the tongue-loosening qualities of the amber fluid to cause the player in question to unburden himself of a few conclusions he had formed in ten years in the big leagues. If it is heresy, according to the ball players' code, Mr. Griffith probably will have to make the least of it, but there is some undeniable logic in what the fellow had to say.

"What does it all add up to—this baseball business?" the fellow asked with an air of disgust that implied that it didn't add up to much. "The pitchers are supposed to get the hitters out and the hitters are supposed to get the pitchers out of there. If a man gets a hit, why the pitcher's a bum. If the pitcher strikes him out, the hitter's a bum. There's no sense in it.

"Over in one dugout, they're telling you to give the hitters that high fast one, and that the other club's a sucker for that kind of a pitch. And over in the other dugout they're probably saying, 'Just lay back there and wait for that high fast one; you'll knock it out of the lot.' So help me, I've seen it happen. It's a screwy game—don't make sense."

IT pleases the Nats no little to observe that the Chicago White Sox are threatening during the first month of the season. This is one stage of the campaign when they are pulling for a new leader to win 'em all, up to a certain point.

Despite the sensational start of the White Sox, the Nats are not alarmed, unduly or otherwise, at the prospect that the Chicago team will figure seriously in the pennant race. As long as they keep knocking off the Yankees, Tigers and Indians, the Nats feel indebted to the Chisox. The business of overhauling the Chicago club will be nicely attended to in due time, they feel.

The Yankees and the Indians are still the clubs to beat in the pennant race, according to Manager Bucky Harris. He is one of those who subscribe to the theory that the Tigers were an unusually luck club to win the pennant last season and that they will have only a one-year reign as champions. Boiled down, the team that beats the Yanks and Injuns will win the pennant, according to Harris.

For all their added power, the White Sox hardly figure as a pennant contender. Such items as Jack Hayes, normally a .270 hitter, batting .360, contribute to this belief. Sundry other White Sox, including the pitchers, Sam Jones and Ted Lyons, possess winning averages as far over their heads as the Milky Way. When the field straightens out for the stretch run, the White Sox figure to figure about as prominently as the eyes in Durante's face.

HERE in Michigan the State Legislature the other day passed a law permitting 20-round bouts, and thus paved the way for the matching of Max Baer and Joe Louis in the event that the local Negro sensation negotiates next month's bout with Primo Carnera in New York. The Detroit Fair Grounds, scene of the race meetings, will be the site of the bout if, as and when it is staged.

Baer himself urged the Legislature to enact the 20-round law on the promise that he would meet Louis, so, apparently, the color line is out as far as the world's championship is concerned. It will be the first mixed bout for the title in the United States since Jack Johnson stopped Jim Jeffries at Reno 25 years ago and almost precipitated race riots in several cities, including Washington.

The odds on the Baer-Louis bout will be governed by what happens in the Louis-Carnera match, but in any event Baer will enter the ring a favorite. Should Louis stiffen Primo in the early rounds, there will always exist the belief that Baer softened up the Italian by that terrific beating he gave Primo last June, and there still will remain some doubt as to whether Louis can take it. Carnera is no healthy puncher, and nobody yet has hit the Negro with the kind of weapons that Baer owns.

Of course, this is being written on the supposition that Baer will do away with Jimmy Braddock very briefly in their title match at New York. Braddock enjoys the unique dinstinction of being the only heavyweight title contender in history who is a 5-to-1 shot not only to lose but to get knocked out. This, the worst match in recent heavyweight history, will end in the round that Baer decides to become serious, or else this department will have hit a new low as a prophet.

'Hooray,' Screams Populace, Seeing 'Baer Shot' Headline

By Paul Gallico,

By a Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The local papers are going awfully sissy on us, it seems to me, when with one or two exceptions they pass up an elegant story such as the wounding of Max Adelbert Baer in the left bosom, with a few curt lines printed on an inside page with the knowing air of one who has smelt out a press agent's story and is very proud of himself. Here was a tale, it appeared to me, which deserved to be smacked all over page one with six-inch headlines—"Max Baer Shot!" It seems to me to be a circulation manager's natural. A million people seeing the headline would yell—"hooray hooray!" And buy it, to see where. True, they would be annoyed no end when they discovered that it was with a blank cartridge, but that doesn't seem to be our fault since we would merely be printing the news. If our clients wish us to substitute real bullets the next time Mr. Baer is plugged in a radio skit, it will cost them more than two cents a day and a nickel on Sunday. I suppose, had most of us used big headlines to advertise a more or less harmless powder burn, the customers could have accused us of scare-heading and yellow journalism. To which I would reply that we were merely all hoping for the best.

It is a delicate, ethical question whether or no you would mislead your public on such a story or whether you should somehow manage to include in your headline the fact that the cartridge bore no lead and that the victim was not seriously injured. There were some who contend that the headline, "bear shot," would bring instantaneous pleasure to millions, a pleasure and a thrill that not even the disappointment of finding out that he wasn't late could really mar. This is a natural reaction in many cases. When the news was conveyed to my couch per telephone, I, myself, called up a friend to tell him. I said—"Max Baer was shot." He said—"Good, who did it?"

Then I explained that it was merely a piece of cartridge wadding and powder burns over the heart and that the champion had been injected with anti-tetanus fluid. Far from chiding me for raising his hopes, my friend said a little witsfully—"You know, they say sometimes that anti-tetanus serum doesn't work. You're sure there was no bullet in the gun? That's criminal negligence. Guns should always be loaded and with ball cartridges. There are too many people escaping these days."

17,433 Pay $49,915 to See 'Miracle Worker' Make History.

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., May 10.—The fighting machine that is Tony Canzoneri accomplished what no other fighting machine ever has been able to accomplish by regaining his lightweight championship from Lou Ambers in a thrill-packed 15-round bout here tonight.

In trouncing the Herkimer Hurricane, who had been designated by the New York Boxing Commission as the man to fight the former titleholder for the crown abdicated by Barney Ross, Canzoneri lost only five rounds—four of them by the narrowest of margins and one when he was penalized for an unintentional low blow.

Flashes Vicious Right.

The recrowned lightweight king was the boxer tonight—the boxer whose cruel right hand lay ready to be unsheathed on a split second's notice when the whirlwind fighter from Upstate New York threatened to outspeed him. Time after time, Ambers, whose fighting style is almost an exact counterpart of that of Pete Sarron, seemed on the verge of taking the lead to outpunch the former New Orleans newsboy, but each time Tony slowed him down to his speed with that vicious right.

Ambers was down for a two count and a three count in the third round and was sent spinning to the canvas for no count in the fifteenth as Canzoneri unleashed his right with particular venom. The Herkimer Hurricane was staggered in almost every round by the same cruel weapon.

Slips in Fourth.

Only once or twice was Ambers able to land enough blows to disconcert the new champion and the closest Canzoneri came to being knocked down was in the fourth round when he slipped to his knees ducking a sizzling left hook directed at his Babe-Ruthish head.

The near-capacity crowd of 17,433, who paid $49,915.60 to see the "miracle worker" perform his miracle, gave Tony the most rousing acknowledgement that ever greeted a winner in the Garden. Although little doubt existed in most minds as to who was entitled to wear the diadem which once graced the brows of Gans, Leonard and other ring greats, not a soul left the massive punch bowl until Uncle Joe Humphries had cackled, "The winner, and once again lightweight champion"—he got no further as the roar of the crowd drowned him out.

'Ivy League' Holds Track Meet Today

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., May 10.—The first "Ivy League" track and field championships, bringing together seven of the East's outstanding universities, is expected to develop a keen contest for team honors among Columbia, Cornell and Harvard tomorrow at Palmer Stadium.

These three are the best balanced arrays in the "heptagonal" meet which also will involve Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Princeton and Yale. A crowd of 20,000 is anticipated for the events.

Sullivan Stops Nats, 8 to 4, For Tigers

Hadley Nicked for 5 Runs in Seventh to Break 2-2 Deadlock.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, May 10.—Detroit's Abie's Irish Rose combination of Sullivan and Greenberg staged an act this afternoon that terminated the Nats' two-game winning streak and won the applause of 10,500 fans.

It was a happy ending for the Tigers by a score of 8 to 4. Sullivan did the pitching and helped out with the hitting as the 1,800 ladies' day fans in the crowd shrieked their delight at the discomfiture of the Nats.

For six innings it was a 2-2 ballgame, with big Hank Greenberg's home run into the teeth of a young gale representing the Tigers' tallies, but in the seventh Bump Hadley, who started on the mound for the Nats, lost control of the situation and the Tigers poured five runs over the plate.

Until that point Hadley had pitched masterful ball, holding the Tigers to two hits, but he lost the lead when young Sullivan bounced a single into left field with two on base to start the avalanche of Detroit runs.

Pettit Relieves Hadley.

Young Sullivan, a graduate of the Hollywood club of the Coast League, who at this writing is Detroit's leading pitcher, with three victories and one defeat, left-handed the Nats into submission with a seven-hit performance. He had a five-hit game to his credit until the ninth, wen, in the comfort of a five-run lead, he surrendered two more hits and two runs.

That big seventh inning of the Tigers commenced innocently enough when Rogell flied to center field, but Gerald Walker jarred Hadley out of his complacency with a smashing single against the fence in right center. At this point, Hadley's wildness cropped up again and he walked Owen, his sixth base on balls of the game. With the Nats' infield drawn in, Sullivan then bounced a single through the box, to score Walker and put the Tigers in the lead.

Then the ball game went to seed.

Peacock Routs Pitt, 7 and 5, For Title

Loses Only Hole in Final at Woodmont; Shoots Even Par for 13.

By Dave Herman.

THE paths of two old rivals, Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, and Harry Pitt, of Manor, crossed yesterday in the final of the Woodmont Country Club invitation golf tournament, and Peacock, as expected, triumphed.

Shooting par golf for 13 holes, the 23-year-old Maryland State amateur champion crushed Pitt by the unexpectedly large count of 7 and 5, needing par in for a 69 when the battle ended.

Whereas young Peacock was in tip-top form, going over par on only one hole, the fourth, where he was short with his second, three-putted the green and wound up with a 6, Pitt hooked and sliced from the tee and approached poorly.

Loses Only One Hole.

Were it not for that fourth hole, a 384-yarder, not hard by any means, Peacock would have clipped two shots off par. It was the only hole Roger yielded to his Manor rival. Pitt won it with a conceded four.

Just to prove that he could conquer his only "bum" hole, Peacock, on his second tour of the nine-hole course, faced the same hole. This time it was the thirteenth, transformed into a 411-yarder, longer too. Peacock split the middle with his tee shot, and his iron second, beautifully played, ended up 6 feet from the pin. Pitt, missing his drive, knocked his second into the rough, overshot the green with third and conceded the hole to Roger. And thus did Peacock get his birdie 3 and end the match.

Wins Second With Four.

Peacock took the lead by winning the second with a par 4 as Pitt missed his chip. He took the third with a 4. Pitt won the fourth, and Roger proceeded to take the next two holes, the short fifth when he laid his iron shot within 10 feet of the pin and got his 3, and the sixth with a birdie 4 when Pitt knocked his second into a ditch. Pitt had a bad break here, as the ball was virtually under a little bridge, and his attempt to extricate himself failed. They halved the eighth and ninth in par 4s, and went to the tenth with Peacock commanding a 3-up lead. Roger played the next four holes in 1 under par, winning each.

There was some hot golf in the semifinals. Peacock had to travel 21 holes to eliminate Volney Burnett, Indian Spring clubmate, and Pitt put out Hickman Greene, of Manor, 1-up. A 30-foot putt for a par on the fourteenth, a 15-foot chip, which he holed out for a par

Yanks Released Ruth To Get Malone, Claim

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Details of the deal between the National and American leagues whereby the Boston Braves acquired Babe Ruth are beginning to leak out, and here and there lurks considerable hard feeling, particularly in Brooklyn.

It seems that when the matter of placing Ruth for 1935 became a question of national importance, the club owners got together and talked the situation over.

The Yankees didn't want Ruth any longer, but they had to have a right-handed pitcher. Boston and the National League wanted Ruth, and there were pitchers in the league that clubs wouldn't sell or trade to each other, but didn't mind sending to the Yankees in the American League, where the pitcher wouldn't be bobbing up to annoy them by winning ball games away from them.

List Was Prepared.

So the Yankees agreed to pay $15,000 for a National League pitcher and the National League club owners prepared a list from which the Yankees could choose. In return for this, the Yankees gave Ruth his unconditional release and along went the Babe to Boston.

The list, turned over to Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, contained the name of big Pat Malone, one of Joe's favorites when he was piloting the Chicago Cubs to a pennant in 1929.

Col. Jake Ruppert cheerfully mailed Sam Breadon of the Cardinals a check for $15,000 for Malone.

And that's how the Yankees got the right-hander they needed, a pitcher with a value far above $15,000, and a pitcher who never could have been waived out of the National League under any other circumstances.

Stengel Quieted.

The moans in Brooklyn when some of this leaked out were heard far and wide. Casey Stengel, Brooklyn manager, stormed into the front office of the Dodgers, yelling, "Where's the blankety-blank so-and-so who waived on Malone?" The powers that be quietly told him

Jamaica Sees Dead Heat Run

By the Associated Press.

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, N. Y., May 10.—One of the rarest occurrences in horse racing—a dead heat—was witnessed here this afternoon with the running of the second race, a 6-furlong, test for 3-year-olds and upward of the plater division. George W. Ogle's 5-year-old gelding Tractable, the 8-to-5 choice in a field of ten, and Ida Katz' Little Argo, a 40-to-1 chance, passed the judges on such even terms that the officials could not give either a winning margin over the other.

Mrs. Fab, the close second choice, was third, a length of daylight behind the pair. The time was 1:13 1-5.

This was the first dead heat run in the East since last November 7, when A. G. Vanderbilt's Jester B., ridden by Bejshak, and Arthur Hullcoat's Garden Message, Meade up, provided the thrills in the fifth race at Pimlico.

First and second moneys of the purse, in this sort of case, are added and then divided between the owners of the two horses. Those who wagered on either horse are paid off in this manner: The amount of money bet by the player and the amount laid against it by the bookmaker are added and then the player receives half of that total.

35,000 to See Preakness; 11 Named

Post Time 5:45 P. M.; Nellie Flag Is Rated at 3 to 1 Odds.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 10.—Their last workouts a matter of history, 11 3-year-old thoroughbreds quietly munched their oats in closely guarded stalls tonight while thousands of racing fans, many high in the Nation's political and social life, thronged this city for the forty-fifth running of the $25,000 Preakness at Pimlico tomorrow.

Bedded down in a stall far removed from the noise and bustle was William Woodward's Omaha, apparently unaware that he is the horse of the hour. On every street corner, in hotel lobby and barber shop, the name of the chestnut son of Gallant Fox, decisive winner of the Kentucky Derby, was the topic of conversation.

May Be 6-to-5 Choice.

As the result, the Derby winner is expected to go to the post the 6-to-5 choice to duplicate the 1930 triumph of his famous daddy. The race is scheduled to start at about 5:45 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Four other colts, a like number of geldings and two fillies, including the well-fancied Nellie Flag, of Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, were named through the entry box to oppose Omaha. Although it is probable two or three will be scratched, if all 11 should face Starter James Milton, the value to the winner will be $26,825. For Omaha it would mean boosting his total earnings close to the $60,000 mark.

Nellie Flag Second.

Attempting to pick a horse to whip the chestnut of Belair produced a wide difference of opinion, Nellie Flag was made the second choice at 3 to 1, however, largely on the strength of early speed shown in the Derby and the confidence shown by her owner in the daughter of Nellie Morse, winner of the 1924 Preakness.

Maryland fans, liking Maryland-bred horses, settled for the most part on a gelding and colt trained by Preston Burch—Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Commonwealth and her husband's Firethorn. Commonwealth, the gelding, finished far back in the Derby, but the Old Liners are saying it will be a different story when Omaha hooks up with Firethorn, which scored in a decisive manner in his 3-year-old debut early in the week.

Bloodroot Named.

E. R. Bradley created the only surprise when the entries were announced by naming Bloodroot, a little known filly, as a running mate for his Derby disappointment, Boxthorn. It was generally

Brown Twig, $15.10 Shot, Wins by Nose in Pimlico Feature

Daily Double Pays Off at $325.80

Favored Boston Brook Second; Indian News Third in Sixth.

By the Associated Press.

PIMLICO, Md., May 10.—The Equitable Purse, fashioned for 3-year-olds exclusively, that was decided as the sixth race, served as the feature offering for the semi-final day of the meeting at Pimlico this afternoon, and it saw Brown Twig, racing for Mrs. R. H. Heighe and ridden admirably by Maurice Peters being returned victorious. He accounted for the mile and 70-yard test in a sinew straining drive to capture honors before the public choice Boston Brook.

Eight three-year-olds of the better grade lined up for the feature offering and with a fast racing strip prevailing a thrilling contest was witnessed with the winner covering the distance in 1:44 4-5 to gain a nose decision over the strongly backed choice.

Indian News was the one to take down the short end of the purse, then followed Cold Shoulder, one of two contestants that performed for A. G. Vanderbilt to lead home his stable companion Gum, Gallant Prince, Up and Up and Orifice.

Seven homebreds of the 2-year-old ranks produced in Maryland were seen in action for the initial offering of the afternoon, and it resulted in an upset for the talent when Queen Govans, a first-time starter turned in a front-running triumph to score at the direct expense of the favored Peaceful. At the end the winner had a 2½ length margin over the disappointing choice, with Absconder in third position. The dusky J. Brooks had the mount on the winner which paid $49.80.

Mediocre Field.

Showing the same capabilities that carried him to victory a few days ago, Teakwood, from the H. B. Langdon stable earned his second triumph through the jumping field at this meeting when he scored a hollow victory in the 2 miles of the Opportunity Steeplechase that served as the second race. Opposed by six others the winner achieved his success by 15 lengths and paid $7.10. Stir followed the Langdon colt to the finish with Matagain taking the short end of the spoils from the favorite, Caniento.

Eleven mediocre sprinters met in the 6 furlongs of the third number and it saw Highest Point gathering in the main share of the purse when he took the measure of Waterset in a stirring duel. Ridden by R. Workman, Highest Point came from behind to reach the finish showing the way by a half length. Third was captured by Dalmatia, with the favorite, Singing Heart, landing into sixth position. Highest Point returned $9 in the mutuels.

Six contestants drawn from the lowlier class platers were engaged for the fourth number that was the first of the long-distance numbers, and a thrilling finish took place for premier honors with the verdict falling to Army Game after she led from flagfall to finish. Ridden by F. Faust, the 3-year-old miss gained a nose decision over O'Neill with Standout, the lukewarm choice, landing third. The followers of Army Game took down $8.30.

Zuni Runs Well.

Maiden 2-year-olds furnished the contention for the fifth, another test at 4½ furlongs, and the result was popular with the crowd when C. V. Whitney's Zuni graduated out of the nonwinning ranks to score in a tenacious drive. Ridden by R. Workman for that rider's second success of the day, Zuni managed to hold on long enough to defeat Flosilda by a nose, while Mr. Quick landed third a length back of the fighting leaders.

Another choice suffered defeat and the talent received a stunning setback when Civil War, regarded to have the seventh race at his mercy, failed dismally in his endeavor and finished unplaced in a field of 12 ordinary sprinters that accepted the issue. The winner for this turned up in Heiress.

Chart of Pimlico Races

(Copyright, 1935, by the Daily Racing Form Publishing Co.)

WEATHER, CLEAR; TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. The Recession. Purse, $500; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:26. Off at 2:26. Winner, J. Farrell, jr.'s blk. f. (2), by Bucellas—Belle of Govans. Trained by L. E. Phillips. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 4-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	½	Stretch	Finish	Jockeys	Straight

SAUCY VIXEN	113	3	4	8²	7	7	7	Merrill	8.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUEEN GOVANS, $49.60, $14.30, $5.10; PEACEFUL, $3.40, $2.50; ABSCONDER, $2.90.

QUEEN GOVANS began quickly, opened up a clear lead early, saved much ground, then held PEACEFUL safe when placed to punishment during the closing furlong. PEACEFUL, on the outside of the leaders from the beginning, threatened entering the home stretch, but was not good enough in the final drive. ABSCONDER was under strong pressure for the entire trip and was best of the others. SECURED was unable to better his position in the final stages. EASTER LAD was held safe. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. The Opportunity Steeplechase. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:56½. Winner, R. B. Langdon's b. g. (9), by Heaverswood—Almond Eyes. Trained by N. D. Tavenner. Value to winner, $750; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 3:53 1-5 (13 jumps).

Horses	Wgt.	Post	Str.	4	8	12	13	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEAKWOOD, $7.10, $4.20, $2.80; STIR, $7.60, $4.50; MATAGAIN, $3.80.

TEAKWOOD, rated close to the leaders for the first mile, took command at the tenth fence, then drew out rapidly when shaken up in the closing stages. STIR moved up strongly going to the twelfth jump, but weakened badly thereafter. MATAGAIN improved his position steadily after being reserved off the pace, and finished with good courage. CANIENTO followed close to the leaders early, saved much ground at all of his fences. He made a bad landing at the next to last fence and stopped badly. SWANSEA was done after going a mile. STARBORN and SPRINGDALE ROSE were held safe.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. The Palmetto (first division). Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:35½. Winner, J. D. Gratton's b. g. (6), by Supremus—Country Princess. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHEST POINT, $9.00, $5.10, $4.60; WATERSET, $8.40, $6.40; DALMATIA, $9.60.

TWO-DOLLAR DAILY DOUBLE (first and third races)—PAID $325.80.

HIGHEST POINT worked his way into contention steadily, slipped through on the inside of WATERSET entering the home stretch, then finished gamely to get up inside the closing furlong. WATERSET raced JINNEE into submission, responded to pressure and held on resolutely. DALMATIA went forwardly and came with good courage for the closing test. CANDESCENT bettered her position on the outside and closed solidly. R. PINCHOT closed full of run on the outside. SINGING HEART was backing up when the break came and could not reach contention. JINNEE went strongly for five furlongs. HELEN BAR stopped.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Herring Run. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:02½. Winner, Mrs. B. Christmas' ch. f. (3), by Bright Knight—Maid at Arms. Trained by B. B. Christmas. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42, 1:48 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARMY GAME, $8.30, $4.30, $2.50; O'NEIL, $5.00, $2.80; STANDOUT, $2.30.

ARMY GAME outran her field to the first turn, was steadied along while resisting contention from O'NEIL, responded willingly when reaching the home stretch and outstayed the latter in a strong drive. O'NEILL followed close to the winner from the beginning, made repeated efforts and fought it out stubbornly. STANDOUT, fated back of the leaders, came wide into the home stretch, then hung during the closing drive. BUNGALOW could not menace during the final issue. PATIENT SAINT and MISTY HELEN were outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $900. The Tecumseh. For 2-year-olds; maidens. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:35½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's br. c. (2), by Chicle—Zelida. Trained by T. Healey. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 0:55 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZUNI, $9.40, $4.90, $3.20; FLOSILDA, $4.80, $3.50; MR. QUICK, $3.50.

ZUNI, away in the first flight, raced NIGHT PLAY into submission, drew clear when straightened into the home stretch, but had to be vigorously urged nearing the end to stall off FLOSILDA. Latter went in early contention, responded to punishment, and was wearing the winner down at every stride. MR. QUICK, slow to settle in his stride, closed strong. HYMN bettered her position slowly in the closing drive. MATAPEAKE was hard ridden throughout. STUMBLE could not enter contention. CLOSING TIME was never a factor. NIGHT PLAY displayed early speed. EXALTATION was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; allowances. The Equitable. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:03. Off at 5:06½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's b. or br. c. (3), by Brown Jug—Zenobia II. Trained by T. A. Bonsack. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 4-5.

†A. G. Vanderbilt entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROWN TWIG, $15.10, $5.50, $3.80; BOSTON BROOK, $3.80, $2.80; INDIAN NEWS, $5.00.

BROWN TWIG, forced to stay on the inside to maintain a forward position after entering the back stretch, luckily found room to engage the leaders, drew on even terms with the pacemaker, then outfinished BOSTON BROOK in the closing stages. BOSTON BROOK displaced ORIFICE without effort, was always the pacemaker's master, and then continued stoutly when collared. INDIAN NEWS worked her way up on the outside and closed with excellent courage. COLD SHOULDER could not reach contention. GUM was used up in effort to force the pace for COLD SHOULDER.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. The Palmetto (second division). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates and shute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:34. Off at 5:36. Winner, E. Craigie's br. m. (5), by Bunting—Dixie Bird. Trained by J. Hammerschmitt. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEIRESS, $8.90, $4.00, $3.20; DISTRACTING, $6.30, $4.40; WAR SAINT, $5.90.

HEIRESS permitted to race under her own courage for the first half-mile, awaited the outside when reaching the home stretch, set to the front with a rush and finished with speed in reserve. DISTRACTING went prominently and closed with good courage in the final drive. WAR SAINT had a lot taken out of him racing CIVIL WAR into defeat and weakened in the final issue. SQUEEZE OUT could not reach the leaders. STAR CHASE went seventh. MINNA was held safe.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Howard. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:03. Off at 6:04. Winner, Mrs. L. Viau's b. g. (6), by Sun Briar—Mary Agnes. Trained by J. F. Jones. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:41 3-5, 1:48 2-5.

APATHY	110	6	6	6½	7	7	7	O'Malley	102.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN SPEAR, $5.10, $3.50, $2.90; HEREWARD, $3.20, $3.00; HARKY, $3.80.

SUN SPEAR, rated along close to the leaders, challenged gamely when placed to a drive, wore HEREWARD down inside the final furlong and came away under pressure. HEREWARD forced a steady pace while following HARKY, gained a brief lead in the last three-sixteenths, but could not withstand the winner. HARKY kept under pressure while setting the pace, saved ground, but could not stay when the real issue came. MOROCEN showed a good effort. TIGHT WAD was never a factor.

Whoopee, With Two Firsts and a Third, Stars at Horse Show

Tie Results In Race for Points

Sherwood and Jericho Are Among Winners; No Bad Spills.

By Laurance F. Stuntz.

IT seems that down in Orange, Va., there lives a horse which never gets interested in horse shows until they put a pretty discouraging jump in front of him, but yesterday he found the National Capital Show interesting enough to win first place in the two hardest jumping classes.

The horse is Whoopee, a middle-aged brown gelding hailing from the Clifton Farms. His score for the day was two blue ribbons and a third place. He won the third in a class so evenly matched that it took three jump-offs to decide it, which ought to be enough proof that he was not far behind the winner.

But Whoopee was not the only star performer of the show by any means. Firenze Red Tape, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim's pride, won the $2,200 Karl Corby Trophy for the second consecutive time. And he won it jumping against Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Bon Diable, which already has won it twice and was second yesterday.

Sherwood Has Three.

The four-cornered tussle for the show championship is just about where it was yesterday morning. Alston, which took three firsts Thursday, was resting on his laurels yesterday, not appearing in the ring at all. Sherwood, the E. L. Redmon hope, won another blue in the hunter hack class, giving him a total of three and tying the score, Jericho, new gray star of the Whitneys, took a first in the class for 5-and-6-year-olds suitable to become hunters. Mezzo, Robert B. Montgomery's mare, won the De Graw Memorial Trophy for local hunters, tying him with Jericho, both having a brace of blues.

But more about Whoopee. First he showed up in the Skyscraper class, which entails negotiating a series of 5-foot jumps. He jumped cleanly to win by a fair margin. Next he appeared in the touch and out class, with two tips in his first appearance. They raised the jumps to 4½ feet, called him back for the jump-off, and he cleared all of them cleanly. That gave him a third place.

Whoopee entered the triple bar jump after he saw the barriers—triple bars, 4 feet high with a 6-foot spread. He made a few faults in the first round. When the jumps were spread to 7 feet to end a tie, he jumped them all cleanly, apparently he's just a horse which doesn't try if it doesn't look hard.

Miss Marjorie McLeod and Gulf Breeze cantered out of the ring after the class for local saddle horses. Miss McLeod carried a silver salver and a pleased expression. Gulf Breeze wore the blue ribbon on his bridle. All these were won from Jack Lightning, the Vernon Owen horse which was third last year. Jack Lightning was third yesterday, Mrs. Catherine Clark's Bob o' Link taking the second money.

The final session starts this morning at 10 o'clock, with pony classes scheduled up to noon.

Valley Schedule Ready Next Week

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 10.—The schedule of the Valley League will be mailed to the directors next week, President George Hiltsman said today. The draft was not available at the meeting of the directors held last night at Charlottesville when the circuit by-laws were adopted.

The season will open during the first week in June, being delayed because a number of the clubs are dependent upon college players.

All of the clubs represented at the meeting asserted they will have stronger aggregations than a year ago. Culpeper, Orange, Charlottesville and Harrisonburg are dependent upon college players, while Front Royal and the Heurich Brewers, of Washington, are all set to open league play and are playing exhibition games.

Short's Home Run in 8th Climaxes Generals' Winning Rally.

EMMY DICKMAN, brilliant young Washington and Lee sophomore hurler, yesterday pitched the Generals to the 1935 Southern Conference championship by turning back Maryland, 7 to 4, at College Park. It was the Virginian's eighth consecutive conference win.

A home run by Short, the climax of a hectic eighth inning that saw the Generals come from behind and assume a 5-to-4 lead, featured the game. But to make the decision more binding the newly crowned champions went on to score two additional runs in the ninth on Maryland miscues.

Washington and Lee scored its first run in the initial stanza when Mattox walked, stole second and went to third on an infield out. He scored when Bartoo muffed Short's grounder at shortstop.

Take 3-to-1 Lead.

Maryland got this one back in the fourth on successive singles by Keller, Love and Nelson, and in the next inning the Terps assumed a 3-to-1 lead as Love singled with the bases filled, Keller and Stonebraker scored on the hit.

Maryland's final tally was made in the sixth by Lyman McAboy, who walked and made the rest of the circuit on a pair of bad throws, to second and third bases, designed to catch him in the act of stealing.

Central High Wins At Fredericksburg

Smith Allows Three Hits in 10-to-3 Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 10.—Fine pitching on the part of Bill Smith, Central High school moundsman, enabled the Washington school to defeat Fredericksburg High, 10 to 3, here this afternoon.

Throughout the nine innings Smith wandered into tough spots, but in each instance settled down and worked himself out nicely. He allowed Johnny Fenlon's Yellow Jackets only three blows.

Chumbris and Moran, with three hits each, led the visiting batting attack. Fredericksburg's three hits came in the fourth when Shibley singled with the bases loaded to drive in two runs and in the fifth when two singles went for naught.

Sullivan Stops Nats, 8 to 4, For Tigers

In the order of their occurrence, here is what happened: White singled to right field. Hadley walked Cochrane, filling the bases. Pettit relieved Hadley. Gehringer got a single on a topped roller that Pettit muffed. Greenberg walked. Goslin grounded to Kuhel and the fifth Tiger run of the inning scored.

When the Nats came to bat in the ninth, the Tigers had an 8-to-2 lead after Lyn Lary's wild throw on Walker's grounder had presented them with a run in the eighth, but the Nats had a mild kick left.

Joe Kuhel doubled into right field, and Travis walked. Sullivan unleashed a wild pitch that scored Kuhel and Bolton scored Travis with a single into center. But at this point the Nats' attack wilted. Powell contributed a luscious strikeout after fouling a half dozen balls. Lary flied to Walker and Pinch Hitter Kress lofted to White.

Bolton Hits Homer.

Back in the second inning, Cliff Bolton whistled the first home run of the season over the right-field wall here to put the Nats in a 1-0 lead, but it lasted only two innings.

Hadley hadn't permitted a hit in the first three innings and three double plays had offset his wildness, but the Tigers penetrated his service in the fourth. With one out, Gehringer lined a single into center and then it was that Greenberg whacked his tremendous home run wallop over the left field fence to wipe out the Nats' lead and put the Tigers ahead, 2-1.

Hadley, himself, helped the Nats to tie the score at 2-2 when he led off the sixth with a double to center and eventually scored on Manush's single, and thus the game stood until the seventh when the Tigers got mean about it.

Babe Didrikson Not Entered in Tourney

Ashland, Va., May 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Willard Sullivan, secretary of the Women's Southern Golf Association, said today "we have received no entry from Miss Didrikson and we are not expecting any."

Mrs. Sullivan declined to elaborate on this statement, nor would she comment on reports that Babe Didrikson, famous woman track star, who more recently turned her abilities to golf, would seek to prove her prowess in the Southern tournament at Louisville, Ky., starting May 20. The entry list closes May 18.

Ruth and Malone Tie-up Reported

this was a matter that didn't concern him at all, and please would he mind his own business and not ask any questions.

Big Pat is doing all right with the Yanks. He lost one start, but in relief roles has done yeoman service. McCarthy always could handle the big temperamental fellow. It looks as if he's going to continue to do so successfully. And if the Yankees do finally win the American League pennant, why, it's just the old Babe again who swung it.

League Denies Story.

New York, May 10 (A.P.).—Official National League circles denied today reports from baseball's underground wireless that Babe Ruth cost the National League the services of Pitcher Pat Malone, sold to the New York Yankees by the St. Louis Cardinals for $15,000.

The story, heard in usually knowing quarters, explained the astonishment with which several National League managers greeted word that Malone, traded by the Chicago Cubs to the Cards for Tex Carleton after winning 14 games and losing 7 last season, had been waived on by every club in the league before being sold to the Yankees.

George and Ed Meske To Top Mat Program

Ed (Don) George, co-claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, will return to town to top the weekly show at the Auditorium next Thursday night. He is scheduled to oppose Ed Meske, popular Akron standout, in the one-fall-finish feature of Promoter Joe Turner's all-star card.

Tunney in Social Fray With Banker

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 10.—A society boxing match in which his opponent, Herber Fleishhacker, jr., former Stanford football star, received a puffed nose but from which he emerged unmarked was described today by Gene Tunney.

"No I haven't a black eye" chuckled the former heavyweight champion, when asked about earlier reports he was sporting a "shiner." "It was just a little friendly set-to. Young Fleishhacker wanted me to show him a few punches. I'm sorry about his puffed nose, too."

Yankees Check Streak, Beat Tribe, 6-3

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, May 10. — Behind the steady pitching of Vito Tamulis, stocky left-handed Lithuanian lobber, the Yankees snapped their four-game losing streak today by beating the Indians, 6 to 3. Despite the defeat Cleveland retained the American League lead.

The game marked the return to action of Ben Chapman, Yankee outfielder, who has been laid up with a charley horse since April 27, and Billy Knickerbocker, Indian shortstop, who was stricken with appendicitis before the season started.

Line-up Is Shifted.

With Chapman back, Acting Manager Fletcher gave the Yankee lineup a thorough overhauling and achieved good results. Lou Gehrig, moved up to third in the batting order, belted his second home run of the season in the first inning and the Yanks went on to drive Oral Hildebrand to cover with three more runs in the second.

Chapman, however, aggravated his old injury beating out a hit in the second and had to retire. Knickerbocker's only appearance was as a pinch hitter in the seventh, when he walked and scored the third Cleveland run.

on the seventeenth, enabled Peacock to go to the eighteenth 1 up on Burnett. Here Roger hit his second into a trap, and lost with a 5 to a 4. On the twenty-first hole Peacock pitched stone dead for his par 4, winning as Burnett missed his second and took a 5.

Sinks 15-Footer.

License Is Proposed Against Billboards

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 10.—"The necessity for taxing and licensing billboards which use the highways as shop windows for their wares" was stressed by Mrs. George Sloan, of Warrenton, in addressing members of the Winchester and Clarke Garden Club at the home of Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed, in Clarke County, yesterday.

Citing the widespread interest in the movement to control such display, Mrs. Sloan urged members to contact their representatives with a view of obtaining legislation to control billboards.

Winchester Plays Host to Bi-State Linksmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 10.—On May 18 the Winchester Golf Club will be host to the first Bi-State League match of the season. Four clubs composed of ten men each will compete. Members of the league are Purcellville, Va., Martinsburg, W. Va., Alexandria and Winchester.

Gallaudet Beats American U. Trackmen

Piles Up Margin in Weight Events; Rivals Hurt by Loss of Hill.

AMASSING the bulk of their points in the field events, Gallaudet's trackmen yesterday swept over American University's squad to a 76-50 triumph in their annual meet at Kendall Green.

The victors were outclassed in the running events wherein the Eagles assumed a 40-32 advantage, but American U. was hopelessly lost in the weight events with Bob Hill out of action. Bob Thompson made a valiant effort to save American from defeat, scoring 23 points, but he undertook an impossible test.

100-yard dash—Won by Layne (G.); second, Thompson (A. U.); third, Cochran (A. U.). Time, 10.2 seconds.

Javelin throw—Won by Stanfill (G.); second, Ladner (G.); third, R. Miller (G.). Distance, 146 feet.

Stocks Record Highs for Year In Active Day

Rail Shares Alone Fail to Follow General Upward Swing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—The average of stock prices today was knocking at the door opening into new high territory for 1935, but barely failed to push itself all the way through.

The 30 industrial shares and the 15 utility issues used in compiling the Associated Press average of 60 stocks each made new tops for the year, but a lag in the rails left the combined level of the 60 stocks, at 41.5, just .1 of a point below the January 7, peak of 41.6.

The new high for the industrial group, made today, was 58 against the previous peak of 57.6, while the power and light division was 28.8, against the old high of 28.1.

Considerable profit taking was in evidence in the day's stock dealings, but Wall Street was in a cheerful frame of mind and absorbed the offerings with only minor hesitation. Utilities formed the mainspring of the upward movement, even though, at the close; the best gains of the day were slightly shaded for most of the group.

Buying by Pool Firms Cotton

Purchases Reported to Be as High as 100,000 Bales.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Trade reports of good demand for producers' pool cotton attracted renewed buying of futures today after early losses of 7 to 11 points. The market closed very steady, net unchanged to 10 points higher.

Yesterday's advance to new highs attracted liquidation and foreign selling in the early trading. Moderate hedge selling reflected reports that pool offerings had brought out other spot cotton, in the South. Steadiness of stocks and an unfavorable view of Western belt weather aided the tone. Advices in the trade were that the pool had sold more than 100,000 bales to mills on Thursday.

July	11.99	11.87	11.98-99

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, May 10 (AP).—Following early steadiness bleachable cottonseed oil reacted today under renewed liquidation influenced by the decline in lard and grains. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points net lower. Sales 40 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; May closed 10.45, July, 10.66; September, 10.70; October, 10.65; December, 10.57.

Fruit Company Yields So. Pac. $10,286,413

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—The Southern Pacific Co. has benefitted to the extent of several million dollars in the last few years from dividends distributed by the Pacific Fruit Express Co.

This was disclosed today by the railroad company's pamphlet report for 1934, which listed under dividend income $10,286,413 from the fruit express company, in which the rail system owns a 50 per cent interest. Union Pacific owns the other half interest. Southern Pacific's net last year was $17,003,657, compared with $9,057,073 in 1933.

Brewers Seek Vast Supplies Of Barley, Hops

Output of Malt Liquor This Year Estimated at 50,000,000 Barrels.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Brewers in the United States will use about 50,000,000 bushels of barley and 37,500,000 pounds of hops from the 1935 harvest, it was estimated today by the United States Brewers Association.

The estimate was based on a calculated total production of 50,000,000 barrels of beer, ale, stout and porter this year compared with last year's output of 41,000,000 barrels, the survey stated.

Malt and corn grits may be substituted largely for brewers rice owing to the Government tax of $1.44 on each 100 pounds of rice levied by the Government on March 18, the association's study declared.

Earlier in the year it had been predicted the increased demands of brewers for rice would have resulted in the use of as much as 125,000,000 pounds.

In response to the increased use of barley estimated for the year, farmers barley planting intentions indicate that 11,954,000 acres will be planted to barley compared with 7,144,000 acres in 1934.

Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and California, the largest barley-producing States, will each step up acreage sharply.

Postal Tel. Considers Action on Its Bonds

New York, May 10 (AP).—It is expected that Postal Telegraph Co. directors at their meeting next week will discuss questions raised by the company's failure to earn interest charges on its 5 per cent debentures during the last four years.

George S. Gibbs, president, stated in the annual report that the management is giving careful consideration to what action should be taken because of the unearned interest. The bonds have recently sold off sharply on the New York Stock Exchange, reaching a new low under 30.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Thur.
Advances	396	506
Declines	268	156
Unchanged	169	158
Total issues	833	820

Stocks—Industrials and utilities averages reached new high for the the year in a session of active trading. Rails were the only group that failed to substantially increase prices. Sales for the day were 1,581,260 shares.

Bonds—Utility and industrial issues forged ahead but rails were hesitant and Federals wallowed about in a narrow rut. Transfers increased to $13,287,000.

Curb—Brisk demand for oils led curb shares actively into higher ground after initial hesitation. Sales up to 372,000 shares.

Grains—Closing flurry of stop loss selling on expectations of a good crop report tumbled grains. Crop estimate showed lower percentage than a month ago for a bullish consensus. May wheat closed at 94½. May corn at 88⅜.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.25 while refined closed steady at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 7 and Santos No. 4 closed at 8½.

Bar silver—Up ½ penny to 33 pence in London (72.15 cents per ounce.) In New York last prices were ⅛ of a cent higher at 72⅛ cents per ounce.

Finished Steel Shipments Decline

New York, May 10 (AP). — Shipments of finished steel products by U. S. Steel Corporation in April decreased 76,328 tons to 591,728 tons, compared with 668,056 in March. Shipments in April, 1934, were 643,009 tons and in the same month in 1933 they were 335,321 tons.

Shipments for the first four months of the year totaled 2,376,976, compared with 1,948,495 in the same period last year.

Hudson Has Record April.

Special Action By SEC Required If Foreign Securities Are To Retain Listed Status After July 1; Issuers Abroad Indifferent Or Opposed.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 10.—Bankers who speak for holders of foreign securities and urging the Securities and Exchange Commission to grant exemption from the registration requirements of the securities exchange act of 1934 to foreign government and corporate securities. If this is not done, wholesale delisting of such issues from stock exchanges is held virtually certain by July 1 of this year, when the permanent registration provisions of the law go into effect. Until that date, securities retain their listed status as a result of temporary registration.

Hitherto, foreign securities listed on American exchanges have not been affected by the registration provisions of the securities exchange act. Last August, the Securities and Exchange Commission authorized temporary registration of foreign government and corporate securities which were already listed upon the application of the exchanges themselves, without any action by the issuers abroad. American issuers generally, on the other hand, had to apply for temporary registration.

This temporary registration will expire on June 30, however, thus far, the commission has failed to publish any special application form for foreign issuers, or has it made any other provision for them. In any event, therefore, there is insufficient time left to arrange permanent registration by July 1.

Foreign securities outstanding in this country are held by individual investors, many of them of small means, to a greater extent than many types of domestic corporate securities. Hence, bankers who floated such issues in the past urge that every precaution be taken to avoid injuring such investors by an impairment of the marketability of their holdings.

Most Foreign Issuers Have No Incentive to Act.

Registration of foreign securities involves a number of special problems not encountered in connection with the registration of domestic issues. The most fundamental of these is the apparent indifference of foreign issuers to the retention of the listing privilege. Domestic issuers of bonds are interested in listing their obligations in order to facilitate possible future financing. Managements of corporations that have listed their stocks, especially voting issues, face a revolt from shareholders if application for permanent registration is not made.

Foreign issuers, on the other hand, do not face similar inducements for retaining listing. The likelihood of new foreign financing here, aside from a few countries like Argentina and the Scandinavian nations, is held quite slim. The Johnson act, barring extension of credits to foreign governments in default on debts due the United States Government further narrows prospects of new financing for foreign account in this market. There are few instances where Americans hold enough of a foreign listed stock to exert any material influence on management. Hence, foreign issuers have much less incentive to incur the trouble, expense and liability of filing a permanent registration statement than do American corporations, especially since various periodic statements must be filed after the initial registration.

Bankers here who have checked on the matter believe that a number of foreign issuers of securities now listed in this market would in fact definitely prefer to see them delisted. By tending to depress their quotations, such action would facilitate their repurchase in the open market at low cost. Foreign securities issued in this country have been repatriated on an enormous scale, as Department of Commerce estimates of our balance of payments have shown. Delisting would reduce the cost of such repatriation.

Investor Sole Injured Party.

Accordingly, it is argued that a loss of listing privileges would injure American investors and benefit only those who are now engaged in acquiring foreign securities in this market. Since 40 per cent of the foreign bonds issued in this market that still remain outstanding here are in default, this group of investors has already suffered severe loss, without the further burden of impaired marketability for such holdings that is now threatened.

It has been proposed that the Securities and Exchange Commission grant the status of exempted securities to such foreign issues, and it is confidently expected that such action will be taken by July 1, to permit retention of these issues on the list of various stock exchanges.

Section 3 of the act provides that the commission may grant the exempt status to "such securities as the commission may, by such rules and regulations as it deems necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, either unconditionally or upon specified terms and conditions or for stated period exempt from the operation of any one or more provisions of this title." Hence, a ruling of the commission could maintain the listed status of foreign securities pending the time when some other solution for the problem would be evolved.

SEC Registrations Total $211,300,000 In First Quarter

During the period, January-March, 1935, 75 registration statements covering issues in the amount of slightly more than $211,300,000 became effective. Of this amount, nearly $18,000,000 was covered by 20 statements becoming effective in January, slightly more than $60,000,000, by 23 statements becoming effective in February, and over $133,000,000 by 32 statements which became effective during March.

These 75 registration statements fell into the different groups as follows:

	No. of Statements.	Amount.
Industrials:
January	8	$6,300,000
February	4	400,000
March	18	106,000,000
Financials:
January	4	$4,800,000
February	6	53,000,000
March	5	34,300,000
Reorganizations:
January	3	$6,500,000
February	11	3,000,000
March	9	3,000,000

During the quarter, January-March, 27 registration statements were suspended, 13 in January, 6 of which had previously become effective; 4 in February, 2 of which had become effective, and 10 in March, 4 of which were previously effective.

Life Insurance Week.

Winthrop G. Batchelder, chairman of Life Insurance Week, announced final plans yesterday for the campaign which opens next Monday with a meeting at 8:30 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. More than 400 life underwriters in this city are to share in the week's activities. The following committee have been appointed:

John McElfresh, general agent of the Connecticut Mutual, is in charge of the details for the activities. With him on the committee are Philip Baldwin, of the Northwestern Mutual; F. George Clendaniel, of the Northwestern Mutual, and Harold Kraft, of the Equitable of New York.

Displays will be arranged by Chairman Charles O'Donnell, general agent of the Minnesota Mutual, together with J. B. Cleland, jr., of the Penn Mutual; John F. Cremen, of the Massachusetts Mutual, and William G. Meirs, of the Connecticut Mutual.

Export Copper 8 Cents, High for Over a Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Domestic copper for export attained the highest level in more than a year today when it reached an equivalent of 8 cents a pound in European base ports. Persistent accumulation by European nations that have been engaged in a lot of war talk, together with the curtailment of foreign production, were believed by American copper quarters to be responsible for the rise. Under the terms of an agreement entered into in New York several months ago, production of copper outside of the United States was curtailed 20,000 tons monthly, effective May 1.

Winter Wheat Estimate Less Than on April 1

May 1 Figure Is 431,337,000 Against 435,499,000 a Month Before.

Winter wheat production indicated for this year by May 1 conditions was reported yesterday by the Department of Agriculture to be 431,637,000 bushels.

This compares with 435,499,000 on April 1, 405,034,000 last year, and 618,186,000, the 1928-32 average production.

Indicated rye production is 40,356,000 bushels, compared with 16,040,000 last year and 21,150,000 in 1933.

The condition on May 1 of winter wheat was 75.3 per cent of a normal, compared with 69.8 a month ago, 70.9 a year ago, and 81.2, the 1928-32 average. The average sown to winter wheat last fall was 44,336,00 acres, compared with 41,850,000 the previous year and 44,989,000, the 1928-32 average.

The acreage of winter wheat remaining May 1 for harvest was 30,497,000 acres, compared with 32,945,000 a year ago, and 39,454,000, the 1928-32 average.

The acreage of winter wheat abandoned to May 1 was 31.2 per cent of the acreage sown last fall, compared with 21.3 per cent a year ago, and 15.2 per cent, the 1928-32 average.

The acreage of rye sown last fall was 5,697,000 acres, compared with 5,027,000 last year and 4,470,000 acres in 1933, while the area remaining May 1 for harvest is 3,474,000 acres, compared with 1,937,000 acres a year ago, and 2,348,000 acres in 1933. The condition of rye on May 1 was 82 per cent of a normal, compared with 76.4 a month ago, 67.8 a year ago, and 84.4, the 1928-32 average. The condition of hay was 75.4 per cent of a normal, compared with 69.9 last year, and 83.1, the 1928-32 average.

Federal Bonds Drop Into Rut; Rails Hesitant

Low-Priced Utilities Continue to Attract Investment Buying.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 10.—Utility and industrial issues made fair progress on the bond market today, but rails were hesitant and U. S. Governments dropped back into a narrowly declining rut.

While the investment community remained divided over what form the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, about to be reported out of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, will eventually take, low-priced utility bonds continued to attract investors and several issues made new highs for the year. Included were American & Foreign Power 5s at 68¼, Laclede Gas 5½s at 70 and New Orleans Public Service 5s at 72¾.

Junior industrial bonds likewise were in favor and a few new tops were made in this division, including Sharon Steel Hoop 5½s at 91½, Childs 5s at 66 and Francis Sugar 7½s at 39¾. Warner Picture 6s and several others duplicated the performance but slid back a trifle under the peak before the close. Postal Telegraph 5s and International Telephone 4½s again were steady.

Transfers aggregated $13,287,000, par value, compared with $11,987,000 on Thursday.

Closing Flurry Tumbles Grain

Selling Caused by Fear of Crop Report, Which Proved Bullish.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 10—Sudden tumbles of grain prices today resulted from a flurry of stop-loss selling because of fears of a bearish surprise in Government crop estimates. As a matter of fact, the estimates turned out to be bullish instead of bearish.

The selling flurry came just before the day's trading was ended, and caught the wheat and corn markets both without any aggressive support on the part of buyers. Forecasts pointing to likelihood of showers over a considerable area of the domestic wheat belt had a further bearish influence.

Wheat closed weak at about the day's bottom level, 1¼-1⅜ under yesterday's finish; July, 94¾-94⅞; corn, ⅞-1⅛ down; July, 81⅛-81¼; oats, 1 cent off to ¾ up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents decline.

Corn and oats gave way with wheat, and as a result of word that further shipments of corn were to come here from Georgian Bay. Provisions averaged lower.

Western High Nine Upsets Roosevelt

Both Teams Are Ragged In Field

18 Miscues Committed; 5-1 Lead Erased by Georgetowners.

By John R. Vosburgh.

ROOSEVELT'S Ruff Riders and Western's Red Sox got hopelessly tangled in a weird and frowsy exhibition of baseball yesterday at Eastern Stadium and when the situation was finally unscrambled it was only to discover an even dizzier scramble of the interhigh race, for Western had emerged the surprised owner of a 13-to-6 upset victory.

While the groggy observers all but gave up the idea of trying to figure out the next move of these interhigh teams, the Westerners were celebrating their unexpected triumph with appropriate ceremony marking their reascension into the middle of the championship chase. They are now tied with Tech and Roosevelt for second place, with Eastern's defending champions, victorious in their one start, out in front.

18 Errors in Game.

Roosevelt had little or no semblance to the team which walloped Central, 11 to 3, but succeeded in making off with a share of the honors—the erring honors. The Ruff Riders committed a total of 10 misplays to Western's 8. There were more errors in the game than hits. Nearly every known play in the scorebook, from a balk to a home run, was included in the carnival.

Characteristic of the spectacle was the way it started off when Clarence Allen, Western shortstop, was walked by Pitcher Joe Bovello, took second and third when Second Baseman George Coakley missed the throw from his catcher, and scored when Third Baseman Jack Neely bobbled Coakley's throw.

Roosevelt came back in like fashion in the third with Western pulling some erratic baseball closely rivaling that of its adversary. Neely was safe on an error by Inglesias, Robertson was walked by Pitcher Don Cleary, Rutherford missed a grounder off F. Coakley's bat, Baroni doubled scoring all three runners, Bovello walked, Thompson was safe on a bunt, George Coakley was safe on another boot by Inglesias, allowing Baroni and Bovello to score, and Bailey was hit by one of Cleary's slants. Cleary then passed out of the picture and Coach Moore sent in Ted Kinsman, who retired the side.

Six Runs in Third.

With the score 5 to 1 against them, Western proceeded to score six runs in the third. Brennan was safe on a bad throw by G. Coakley, Edmonston tripled, another error by G. Coakley, a walk and a single by Burns resulted in another run, and in Bovello's departure from the box. Hess and Frank (Barrel) Baroni, who was catching, changed positions. Baroni was greeted with a home run by Allen to left-center field, with Burns and Borden on base, and Western led, 7 to 5.

Kinsman protected the lead by pitching shut-out ball until the ninth, when a single by G. Coakley and three errors let in Roosevelt's sixth run. Baroni was effective until the eighth, when singles by Rutherford, Edmonston and Summerbell helped account for four runs, and singles by Allen and Inglesias paved the way for two more in the ninth. Baroni fanned 12 men in the 6 2-3 innings he pitched.

Rockville in 3d Place; Trims Damascus, 7-3

Behind the timely hitting of Ochsenreiter and Miller, who collected three blows apiece, Rockville High took undisputed possession of third place in the Montgomery County League by defeating Damascus High, 7 to 3, yesterday on the Damascus diamond.

Billy Cleveland was touched for nine hits, but steadied in the pinches and protected the 6-to-1 lead presented him in the third inning. It was Rockville's second victory in the count and pushed Damascus back into sixth place.

Diamond Scrap Won By Randolph-Macon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 10.—Randolph-Macon Academy defeated Shenandoah Valley Academy here this afternoon, 5 to 4, in a well-played game featured by the pitching of Kite for S. V. A., and Jones, for Randolph-Macon. Each allowed five safeties.

Kite set the pace with strikeouts with ten, while Jones whiffed seven local batsmen. Baker, who has batted two home runs for Shenandoah Valley, led the offense for the locals with two hits.

Schoolboys Clash In Maryland Golf

Georgetown Prep Favored in Hillendale Play.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 20.—Shorn of its defending champion and several other youngsters who starred during the past two years, the Maryland Scholastic Association golf championship will open tomorrow morning at Hillendale.

Thirty-six youthful linksmen will engage in the 18-hole qualification round. Seven teams will vie for the laurels won last year by Georgetown Prep. Maurice Nee won the individual diadem last year, but he since then has been graduated from Georgetown Prep.

However, Georgetown Prep still holds the whip hand in the tournament, with Billy and Jack Dettweiler, Robert Troutman, Austin Parks and Hugh Stalling.

Blank Cartridge Won't Stop Baer

Champion Resting After 'Accident' Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 10.—Max Baer took life easy today, recuperating from the powder burn inflicted with a blank cartridge pistol discharged too close to him. He missed a day of training for his title fight next month with James J. Braddock.

The heavyweight champion, who said the accident yesterday "scared hell out of me," slept late and spent the remainder of the day around the big house he has rented at Long Branch. Dr. Max Silverstein ordered him to be quiet, more because of the effects of the tetanus antitoxin given him than because of the burn.

John Marshall High Beats Baby Cavaliers

West End Nine Is Seen Title Contender

Georgetown A. C. Expects to Play Better Than It Did Last Sunday.

JUST what part the young Georgetown A. C. team will play in the pennant race for Post Association honors in the National City B League remains to be seen, but it's safe to predict that Glenn Whitt, Cecil Mayo and company will be in the thick of the fight throughout.

This new entry, making its first appearance in Post Association ranks, has yet to take a forward step in the pennant march, but last Sunday's loss at the hands of Capital Transit nine by a 9-to-8 score has quite unexpectedly left a stimulating effect upon the Georgetown boys.

The West End lads argue they can put up a much superior game to that of Sunday. Whitt is regarded as a much better pitcher than he showed against the Transit team, and the infield of Jim Shaw, at first; Buss Crampton, at second; Bill Harris, at shortstop; Cecil Mayo, at second, and Demalay Deck behind the bat is a dependable defensive unit. Whitt and Mayo have rated troyouts with the Richmond Colts, a class B ball club.

A practice session has been called for the team at 5 o'clock today on No. 3 diamond. Georgetown A. C. faces Lewis Ice Cream Co. tomorrow in a National City game.

G. U. Prep Bows, 15-5, To Montgomery Blair

Montgomery Blair High rallied behind the brilliant pitching of Mike Godfrey to upset Georgetown Prep yesterday, 15 to 5, on the Little Hoyas' diamond.

Godfrey fanned ten batters and coasted to victory behind the 19-hit attack of the Blairites, Johnny Orrison, third sacker, banged out five hits, marking his twelfth single in three days. He shared the stick honors with Turner and Robertson, who collected four apiece.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

The Garble Sisters.

"I see where the Supreme Court found the law to give every railroad man his soldier's bonus unconstitutional."

"It was a close decision, wasn't it?"

"It sure was. Justice Omaha just got up in time to prevent it being a dead heat."

"What was the vote, anyhow?"

"Justices McReynolds, Van Devanter, Plat Eye, Roberts and Braddock held it unconstitutional."

"Who voted the other way?"

"I think it was Justices Brandeis, Stone, Patman and Whiskolo."

* * * *

"I'm not positive, but I think it leaves the dollar still worth 35 cents in our money and makes the railroad workers take adjusted compensation certificates payable in 40 years in gold of the same weight and value."

"Was anything said about streamline engines?"

* * * *

"I don't think 'The Petrified Old Maid' deserved the prize as the best American drama of the year."

"Neither did I. That play, 'Waiting for the Children's Hour' was better and so was Clifford Odett's 'The Bishop Flies Away Home.'"

"Of all the plays I saw this year on Broadway I liked Anderson Maxwell's 'Valley Forest' best."

"That Pulitzer prize committee is goofy. They always pick 'em young. Look how they picked Jim Braddock to meet Babe Baer!"

* * * *

"Who makes up that Pulitzer board, anyhow?"

"William Lyon Phelps, Huey Long, Henry P. Harriman, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Amelia Earhart and Vernon Gomez, if I recall correctly."

"Zoe Akin's 'Every Man a King.'"

* * * *

"Say, what do you think of the King's Jubilee?"

"It was the first time I realized that the King was 100 years old this month. He doesn't look it."

Golfing Note.

Amelia Earhart flew from Mexico to Newark, a distance of 2,100 miles, in 14 hours. That's about one hour less than most women take in considering a 2-foot putt.

The radio having been such a factor in the passage of that bonus bill, it might really be summed up as the story of Patman and Mikeman.

7 Boys Contest Today for C. U. Tuition Award

Last Campus Finals in Post Competition to Begin at 9 A. M.

Seven boys compete this morning for college education in the fourth and last campus contest of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition at the Catholic University of America. Full tuition for the next four years at that institution's College of Arts and Sciences or School of Engineering is the award for which the contestants, all honor seniors in local and Maryland and Virginia high schools, will undergo a series of oral and written tests throughout the entire morning.

Dr. Otto J. Remler, dean of freshmen, is chairman of the faculty examiners, who include the Rev. James M. Campbell, D. D., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Ernest A. Valade, acting dean of the School of Engineering; Dr. Frank O'Hara, professor of political economy; Dr. John J. Meng, of the department of politics, and Dr. Thomas G. Foran, professor of education.

The examinations will start at 9 o'clock this morning, with scholastic aptitude tests, in charge of Dr. Foran. From 11 to 1 o'clock oral examinations and interviews will be held, covering general college entrance subjects, including natural and social sciences, with special emphasis upon civic problems covered in the original essays with which the contestants progressed into the finals.

Reception In Afternoon.

The afternoon will be given over to an entertainment program, including a luncheon in the campus main dining hall and a sight seeing tour through Washington and nearby Virginia with a stop-over visit at the plant of The Washington Post. At a reception in Gibbons Hall, on the campus, the winner of the scholarship award will be announced. The entertainment will be in charge of the Rev. William H. Russell, D. D., assisted by two students, Sidney W. Russell, president of Pi Delta Epsilon, and Daniel E. Lawler, editor of the Cardinal.

The finalists, who have defeated hundreds of opponents in the project's preliminaries, are Paul Eldridge, Eastern High School, and George E. Altmann, jr., Gonzaga High School, Washington; George Walker Gilmer, Scottsville, Va., High School; Robert W. Nix, jr., Waterford, Va., High School; Milton I. Thurston, Parry McCluer High School, Buena Vista, Va.; Alan Habercom, Hagerstown, Md., High School, and Robert J. Conner, Mount St. Mary's College High School, Emmitsburg, Md.

Eldridge, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan P. Eldridge, of 1439 East Capital street, won his championship in the Eastern High finals with an essay entitled, "Can Capitalism Solve the Unemployment Problem?" He is a cadet and track team member and ranks high on his class roll, with outstanding accomplishments in English, economics and civics. His ambition is to major in sociology or economics.

Wrote on "Russia Today."

Altmann, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Altmann, 313 Seventeenth street northeast, placed first in semifinals against scores of opponents at Gonzaga and other local parochial schools with a paper on "Russia Today." He is chairman of publicity in his school's Sodality Club and is active in the debating society and the Knights of the Blessed Sacrament. He hopes to prepare for the priesthood.

Gilmer, 17, is the son of G. W. Gilmer, of Howardsville, Va. His essay covers "The Two-Party System: Its Effect Upon American History." He leads in both scholastics and extracurricular activities, being editor of the school paper and a member of the varsity basket ball and baseball teams and the dramatic club. He is vice president of the honor league and secretary of the music club and athletic association. He has won other essay contests, is a winning debater, and this year represents the Scottsville School on the Albemarle County scholarship team. His ambition is to train for aeronautical engineering.

Nix also desires the aeronautical training. He stands high in his classes and is active on the Waterford baseball team and in the orchestra and music club. He is 16, the son of Capt. Robert W. Nix, jr., of Waterford. His paper is entitled, "America's Experience With and Without a National Bank from 1791 to 1840."

Seeks Aeronautical Career.

Thurston is sports editor of his school paper, manager of the senior baseball team, and a member of the football team and the glee club at Buena Vista. He, too, is ambitious for the C. U. aeronautical engineering course. He stands especially high in science and mathematics studies. He is 18, the son of L. B. Thurston, of Buena Vista. His paper also deals with "Russia Today."

Habercom is 17, a leader in scholastics and other activities at the Hagerstown High School. His essay is on "Pros and Cons of Hitlerism in Germany."

Conner succeeded into the finals this week as alternate in division finals to Ray D. Riley, Emitsburg, Md., High School, who withdrew from the finals. Conner also wrote on "Russia Today." He bases high hopes on the luck of other alternates who have reached previous campus contests, and, if successful, will major in literature for a journalistic career. He is a columnist on his school paper, "The Mountain Echo," and a member of the football and basket ball teams. The son of Mrs. Allan A. Conner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., he will be 17 on May 21.

Six other full tuition scholarships have already been awarded by American and Howard Universities in the current competition. Another will be given by the Georgetown University Foreign Service School upon solution of a tie between Samuel Temin and Carl Francis Gerges, both of Washington, which resulted at Georgetown's campus finals last Saturday.

Senate Scored For Delaying Pure Food Bill

Vote League Official Praises Legislation in Talk at Meeting.

The nation's women are impatient with the Senate for delay in passing the food and drug bill, the general council of the National League of Women Voters was told yesterday by Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, first vice president.

Referring to the bill as the most important piece of legislation in behalf of the consumer now before Congress, Mrs. Baldwin, in a speech to the council, meeting in executive session at the Washington Hotel since Tuesday, said:

"Women voters are constantly being shocked by authenticated reports of lives lost, sight impaired, or other serious injury suffered because of continued sale of dangerous cosmetics. We know that because of false advertising, misleading directions for use of drugs on the label or in advertising, that permanent injury, even death, may result for innocent users."

That is why, she said, hundreds of letters are pouring into league headquarters demanding enactment of the bill and asking the reason for the present Senate stalemate.

A grant of $3,000 and a citation praising the league for its work in developing an informed public opinion wasannounced by Marguerite Wells, league president.

Wife Alleges Husband Put Cigaret in Her Eye

Her husband once poked a lighted cigarette in her eye and on another occasion broke her thumb, Mrs. Gladys E. Settler informed the District Supreme Court yesterday when she filed a petition for a limited divorce under the present laws, with an alternative request that, if the law is amended while her case is pending, she be granted a full divorce.

Mrs. Settler's attorney, Raymond Neudecker, said in the complaint that the husband's "cruel treatment of his spouse" reached a climax when he ejected her from their home while she was clad only in pajamas.

Norris Offers Cloture Threat In Power Fight

Winner in Early Battle, Nebraskan Pushes for Early Vote on TVA.

By the Associated Press.

Victorious in a preliminary battle, Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, yesterday threatened to invoke the drastic and seldom-used Senate cloture rule in an effort to force an early vote on his bill to strengthen the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The dogged Nebraskan, whose determination has written numerous important pieces of legislation onto the statute books, asserted such an intention when Republican opponents of the measure yesterday resumed extensive speeches against it.

His victory came in action making the bill the unfinished business of the Senate after Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont, during recent days had conducted what some called a filibuster against it. Norris' motion to take the measure up was approved without a record vote.

Debate Resumed.

Once the bill was before the Senate, however, the opposition resumed the debate with Senators Dickinson (Republican), Idaho, and Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, contesting several provisions and suggesting changes.

The Norris measure would redefine TVA's authority for the sale of surplus power and the purchase of existing private power plants. It would double the agency's original $50,000,000 bond-issuing authority and provide for Government guarantee of principal and interest of the bonds.

Dickinson protested this provision and said the measure should be deferred until the Supreme Court ruled on the constitutionality of the TVA act. The Federal District Court has held TVA had no right to sell surplus power in competition with private interests.

The Iowan said the provision for Government guarantee of the bonds would have the effect of "putting the people of Iowa into the electric power business in Tennessee and Alabama."

Filibuster Denied.

Barbour denied there was a filibuster against the bill and pointed out Norris on Thursday had talked at length on the bill. The New Jersey member proposed an amendment to make all TVA expenditures subject to the approval of the Comptroller General.

Under the cloture rule, if 16 Senators sign a petition, and two-thirds of those voting approve, debate is limited to one hour for each Senator until a vote on the measure is reached.

Norris is known as the father of the TVA act, legislation for which he battled for years.

Farley Probe Up In Senate Monday

By the Associated Press.

The Senate agreed yesterday to consider Monday the adverse report of its Postoffice Committee on the demand by Senator Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley.

The proposal to consider the committee report was made by Chairman McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, after Long had accused him of delaying the matter. It quickly was approved by the Senate.

In the discussion, McKellar accused Long of making "false charges" against him, and said the Louisiana Senator "doesn't know a fact when he meets it on the road."

The Postoffice Committee reported to the Senate Long's charges against Farley did not warrant an inquiry.

A minority of the committee, however, recommended that the investigation be made.

Pastors to Attend Home Dedication

The new Disciples Home for the Aged, Second and Walnut streets, Takoma Park, will be dedicated at ceremonies planned for 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Ministers of Christian churches in Washington will attend, many of them taking part in the service. The Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, will be one of the speakers. The Rev. R. H. Miller, pastor of National City Christian Church, will deliver the invocation. Andrew Wilson, president of the home, will preside.

Preceding the dedicatory service, an orchestra from Mount Rainier Christian Church will play.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

High spots:

A four-hour show is on WMAL at 2 p. m. with Clem McCarthy, NBC turf ace, doing the description of the Pimlico races. In addition, a stylist will give you hints on racing clothes, 20 entertainers from local station and WBAL, Baltimore, fill in with songs and acts between racing announcements. The Preakness is heard at 5 p. m.

WJSV carries the Preakness at 5:30 p. m.

A variety program, another King's Jubilee celebration, is on WJSV at 2 p. m. The Mills Brothers, Larry Adler, harmonica player, Ann May Wong and others are heard.

"The Significance of the King's Jubilee," by Will Rogers and Dr. John Finley, of the New York Times is on WRC, at 10:45 a. m.

National Geographic Society and the Army Air Corps explain the objects of their stratosphere flight, WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

Speeches:

Eva Le Gallienne, Dizzy and Daffy Dean are guesting with Al Jolson, 8:30 p. m., WRC.

The anniversary of the death of John Marshall is observed in the form of a talk, "The Life and Public Services of John Marshall," by James M. Beck, former Representative from Pennsylvania.

Paul and Lloyd Waner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, are guests of Thornton Fisher, WRC, 6:45 p. m.

This morning at 8:30, WRC, Gordon Hittenmark (Your Timekeeper) is celebrating a very special birthday. Little Abraham Angus, age 7, has spent four years of his life in a crippled children's hospital in Richmond, the other years on crutches. It's his first big party; his sister has bought him a new brown suit, brushed his golden hair, the studio is piled with presents and little Abie is going to have the biggest party he ever dreamed of.

May he have many more happy birthdays.

Auto Club Enlarges Staff.

Expansion of its services to meet increased public demand has forced the Keystone Automobile Club to enlarge its staff, it was announced yesterday by George E. Keneipp, manager.

Uprisings Feared In Philippine Vote

By the Associated Press.

Manila, (Saturday), May 11.—Reports of an alleged plot to intimidate voters, especially women, who will exercise the ballot right next Tuesday for the first time, reached the Philippine constabulary today as it took extraordinary steps to maintain order in the forthcoming constitution plebiscite.

Reinforcements were concentrated in five provinces of southern Luzon Island, where the bloody Sakadlista uprising of May 2 centered.

Despite Sakdalista opposition to the commonwealth constitution, which will be offered to the voters for ratification in the plebiscite, advocates of the new government predicted an overwhelming victory.

Acting Governor General J. R. Hayden, returning from a survey in Laguna Province, expressed confidence conditions had returned to normal and that no more disorders are likely.
